Food Firm TV Gifts Detailed

Airline and football tickets and color television sets are some of the gifts food distributors offer store clerks to make sure their products get good display on supermarket shelves.

Wholesalers who don't play the game can find the stocking clerks have placed their products in a poor location, or have turned all the labels French side out — two moves that are guaranteed to hurt sales, Len Bawtree, chairman of the agriculture committee investigating the industry, said today.

The Socred MLA for Shuswap said such incidents probably have no effect on the cost of the product to the consumer, but can hurt B.C. producers if U.S. distributors are more willing to offer gifts.

And this is when some action should be taken, Bawtree said.

But the incidents are difficult to prove. And there is no evidence at all of any corporate policy that would allow such incidents to take place.

In fact, the major food chains frown on the practice and there have been cases where store clerks have been fired for accepting gifts, Bawtree said.

The Rebates and Allowances Report investigating the food chain from the farmer to the supermarket was tabled in the legislature today.

Researchers say that if the industry really wants to stop the practice of gift-giving, retailers should deal with several different distributors and threaten to de-list products by any wholesaler found to be offering gifts.

The lengthy report details the way the food marketing system works.

"As far as we can figure out, it seems to be working very well," Bawtree said.

BEEF PRICE CHECK SET BY AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board will be asked to take a special look at the retailing and processing sector of the beef industry to make certain there has been no excessive profit-taking in recent weeks as prices have soared, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said today.

Chretien told the Commons he would ask board chairman Harold Renouf to make an immediate study of the situation and to issue a preliminary report as soon as possible.

Chretien made the announcement in response to questioning from Liberal MP Paul McRae (Fort William) who asked if the board could make a speedy investigation into allegations of profiteering by retailers and processors.

Beef prices were a major contributor to the rapid increase in the consumer price index, the most widely used measure of inflation, announced earlier this week.

HUSKY BIDDING TO BE PROBED

OTTAWA (CP) — The justice department has been asked for an opinion on New Democratic Party charges there may have been collusion between two United States companies to drive up the value of shares in Husky Oil Ltd.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said in an interview he has written a letter to the government law officers "seeking the broadest possible advice" on the question of collusion.

Earlier in the Commons, Douglas said a "game of stock market badminton" between Husky of Cody, Wy. and Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles had driven up the value of Husky stock by $200 million.

Meanwhile, it was reported that North American stock exchanges are investigating the takeover bids of Husky Oil Ltd. of Calgary by Petro-Canada and Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles.

Within hours of each other Thursday, both competitors — Petro-Canada and Occidental — raised their bids for Husky.

Harold Gibson, director of market operations for the Toronto Stock Exchange, said the exchange has written to brokers requesting information on their clients who were buying and selling Husky stock.

Gibson said the examination so far has been limited to last week's trading activity when the takeover bid was first revealed to the public.

Speculation was that inside information was leaked to some stock buyers.

Post Office Strike Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — It now seems apparent that inside postal workers will have to go on strike to win their contract dispute with the post office, Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), said Thursday.

Parrot said at a news conference the post office is conducting a witch-hunt against Toronto employees who publicly criticized post office management.

All employees who were quoted in a front-page Toronto Star article which appeared May 25 have been subpoenaed to appear before a special inquiry into allegations of vandalism and waste in the post office.

Parrot said the post office is deliberately harassing employees at a time when the union is attempting to resolve its contract dispute through conciliation.

The union will not be in a legal strike position until after the three-member conciliation commission has issued its report. Conciliation hearings are to continue at least until the end of this month.

Zaire Regrets It's Unable To Hire Today

OTTAWA (CP) — The Zairian Embassy appealed to Canadians Thursday to stop telephoning about job opportunities for foreign mercenaries in Zaire's armed forces.

Ndagano Bulumba, first counsellor in the embassy, said in a statement evil forces are spreading the false rumor that Zaire is recruiting mercenaries.

These evil forces had ravaged Zaire, he said, apparently referring to the recent invasion of southern Zaire by Katangan rebels.

Bulumba denied "energetically and categorically" that Zaire is seeking foreign mercenaries and urged potential Canadian soldiers of fortune to stop bothering the embassy with telephone calls.

Welfare Cases Bound for North

Hound Dog
LOVE

CANINE COUTURE has arrived in Victoria, in the form of the Doggy T-shirt, modelled here by Mac with the help of Rick Farrington, manager of the T-Shirt Emporium in the Hillside shopping centre. They all bear appropriate slogans, and there's even one to reassure nervous letter carriers: "I love mailmen." With the doggy T-shirt already here, can dog pants for panting dogs be far behind? In houndstooth check, naturally. (John McKay photo).

Thousands of welfare recipients will be encouraged — and forced if necessary — to leave Vancouver in a new plan to keep them from a life of drugs, liquor and prostitution, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

He said four possibilities are being considered:

— Free shelter and food facilities outside Vancouver to encourage recipients to move.

— Financial aid towards moving costs.

— A "repatriation" counselling scheme to help recipients and their families enjoy productive lives.

— Cancellation of welfare for those who refuse to move.

Vander Zalm said the concept, first raised by his ministry staff in Vancouver, is being discussed at the managerial level.

Once all staff recommendations are in, a co-ordinated policy will be formulated and regulations will be introduced or amended, he said.

Victoria does not have the same problem so no similar action is being considered here, Vander Zalm said today.

He said there is no danger of Victoria picking up Vancouver's problem when the welfare people are forced to leave the Lower Mainland.

He said the ministry will put all its efforts into directing them away from any urban area into the northern rural areas.

The ministry just won't let it happen, he said.

"I think we've learned from the Vancouver situation where the concentration of services tends to lock the problems in."

Those offices won't be concentrated in one area again, he said.

The minister said he wants to resolve the problem before this fall because downtown Vancouver is in an emergency situation.

NDP human resources critic Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) said Vander Zalm's plan is a "violation of democratic principles which makes scapegoats of the poor."

She called the threat of loss of welfare benefits inhuman and degrading. She said it was only a year ago that Vander Zalm had forbidden welfare recipients from living in rural areas.

Vander Zalm said the downtown crisis has been caused mainly by a flood of thousands of people into Vancouver, most of them native Indians from northern communities.

"They're being attracted here by the bright lights and excitement," he said.

"Troubles arise because these people have few skills, abilities or qualifications for getting employment. They end up walking from beer parlor to beer parlor and from pool hall to pool hall and getting into trouble."

He said in the past the government has tried to solve the problem by providing hostels, food kitchens and drop-

Free Shuttle Bus Starts Run July 1

A free shuttle bus for downtown shoppers will get a trial run this summer, Victoria city council's economic development committee decided Thursday.

Two buses will operate in and around the city shopping core starting July 1 — if the buses are a success they will become a year-round feature.

Committee chairman Ald. Bill Tindall said the bus service will be reviewed after its first few weeks and discontinued if it's not worthwhile.

But as long as people are using it, he said, it should be continued.

It will cost an estimated $46,800 to run the buses until January — a full year's operation would cost roughly $72,000.

Tindall said the shuttle bus system, first tried out in the city last year during the Christmas season, could help revitalize the city.

He said downtown businesses support the concept.

Ald. Murray Glazier expressed some doubts about the shuttle system.

"I was not impressed by the shuttle bus at Christmas time," he said "It just didn't work."

Tindall replied that Glazier's statement was opinion only. He said 500 people a day used the buses last year "and I thought that was a good average."

Glazier later voted to support the shuttle bus on a month-to-month basis.

He said the program would have to be re-examined at the end of July.

The buses will operate from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day, running in a clockwise direction on the rectangle of the streets formed by Douglas, Humboldt, Government and Fisgard.

The buses would also make three round trips daily to any cruise ships docked in the area.

IWA OUT UP-ISLAND

COURTENAY (CP) — About 175 members of the International Woodworkers of America walked off the job today, shutting down the Crown Zerllerbach Canada Ltd. logging operation.

Union spokesman Rudy Van der Brink said the main issue in the dispute is job security and the use of non-union contract labor. No meeting with the company has been set up, he said.

AIB's Raise Vetoed

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases of 11.5 per cent for anti-inflation board employees would be unacceptable to the government, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said today, adding that the board's chairman, Harold Renouf, has denied the raises will be that large.

Renouf, who was not available for immediate comment, requested Parliament Thursday for funds totalling $12.5 million in the current fiscal year for the board's staff.

That is an increase of $479,000 for the last year in spite of a reduction in the number of jobs to 635 from 680.

In the Commons, Chretien said Renouf denies he is asking for increases above those allowed other Canadian workers. Most workers now under the anti-inflation program are restricted to pay raises of a maximum six per cent in 1978.

Harold Renouf told the Commons finance committee Thursday that he has asked the government for an additional $479,000 in salaries and wages this year, bringing the board's total payroll to $12.5 million.

Yet the anticipated number of jobs at the board would drop to 635 from 680, he said.

Calculation shows the average board salary would rise by more than 11.5 per cent — almost twice the six-per-cent standard set by the board for other wage settlements this year — to $19,685 from $17,647.

Renouf said the increases are needed to cover higher civil service union contracts, annual raises, promotions and benefits.

The anti-inflation board was formally replaced Thursday by another government monitoring agency run by the Economic Council of Canada.

Two Held In Killing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police were holding two men Thursday after the shooting death of a man during a holdup at a city store.

Erik Armand Desmet, 25, of no known address, was gunned down by one of the holdup men late Wednesday night at the Mac's convenience store on Denman Street in the West End.

They said two suspects were arrested at separate city locations Thursday.

Police said Desmet walked into the store, directly beside Dillinger's Cabaret, about 11:30 p.m. while the holdup was in progress. Three customers and the manager had been ordered to the back of the store.

Legalize Heroin . . . Junkie's Dying Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 46-year-old heroin addict who killed himself last week wrote in a suicide note that B.C.'s proposed compulsory heroin treatment program "has as much chance to succeed as I have of flying to Jupiter on a Cessna."

Clifford Buckle, whose body was found in an East End hotel room, left notes to relatives and to the woman he lived with, pleading with them to understand his addiction to heroin.

Included in the letters were what Buckle called "non-personal thoughts" in which he argued against B.C.'s planned oompulsory heroin addiction program and said few addicts can be reformed.

Expected to begin in January, 1979, the provincial heroin program would allow persons identified as heroin users, not necessarily convicted of anything, to be held for a minimum of six months behind locked doors, followed by compulsory treatment at a community clinic.

Buckle, an addict and criminal who worked on and off as a construction worker, tried unsuccessfully to stay on a treatment program using methadone, a synthetic drug which satisfies the craving for heroin but does not produce the euphoric high.

In his letter he wrote that he thought Britain's program would produce different results.

"I'm convinced that legalized drugs of our choice would decrease our crime rate by at least 70 per cent," he wrote. "Last summer I spoke to a hard-core addict who had been in England for four years with his brother.

"They are not using it now and doing very well."

The letters were found after his death by his girlfriend, also an addict and prostitute who has been on methadone for the last 11 years.

She said that 12 months before Buckle committed suicide it looked as if he might quit heroin and he received heroin through prescriptions from her psychiatrist.

But he took up with old friends around Christmas and was soon taking heavy doses of depressant pills, she said.

"I knew he was suicidal," she said. "After living with me for three years and away from the street he was able to see his old life from a different viewpoint.

"When he went back, he hated it, but he was so hooked on pills he couldn't get away."

The woman said she is able to live a normal life on heavy doses of methadone because she can control her intake but she is unwilling to go through the agony of quitting outright.

"If they tried to force me to go through the program, I would take my own life first," she said.

(The B.C. Corrections Association has asked the government to delay the compulsory treatment legislation until other voluntary programs can be examined. See story on page 55).

MPs Plan Film to Polish Image

OTTAWA (CP) — Sensitive to criticism from the public about their behavior since TV cameras came to the House of Commons last fall, MPs suggested Thursday that parliamentary television crews put together films to explain House decorum.

"Some people thought we were a bunch of buffoons, animals, monkeys . . . and misbehaved children," Derek Backburn, New Democrat for Brant, told the special Commons' committee on parliamentary broadcasts.

"We're doing our best to clean up our act," Blackburn said.

But, in the meantime, special films are needed to explain the 700 years of history behind parliamentary behavior, Blackburn said.

"I hate to use the word educate the public," but the institution needs explaining because no one else has been doing it on TV, he said.

"We perhaps have neglected to inform the public enough about Parliamentary procedures," Yvon Pinard (L—Drummond) said.

Films on "pedestrian" subjects such as House rules are one thing, but the decorum issue is another, Jerome said.

In letters to MPs and to newspaper editors, the public has often had less than complimentary remarks for the desk thumping, cat-calling, heckling, shouting and partisan barbs that occur almost daily in the Commons.

Ray Hnatyshyn (PC—Saskatoon-Biggar) said he is sure that every MP has received stacks of complaints.

One visiting U.S. journalist, taken aback by her first exposure to the daily question period, dubbed the MPs' performances as "the trained seal act."

The only MP at the committee meeting who objected to Parliament-sponsored films was Robert Daudlin (L—Kent-Essex), who said the idea apparently went beyond the concept of producing an electronic Hansard. Hansard is the verbatim written record of parliamentary proceedings.

Although he supported the film idea, Hnatyshyn warned fellow MPs not to look to the films as a public relations panacea that would smother all public criticism of MP behavior.

"I just don't think we should try to fool ourselves," Hnatyshyn.

It has not yet been decided how the films would be distributed but Pinard thought they might be shown on television just prior to the start of the daily question period.

He also compared the films to brochures handed out to visitors of the British Parliament to explain rules and procedures.

$23M Deal for Lottery

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Loto Canada Corp. says the corporation has awarded a contract worth up to $23 million to General Instrument of Canada Ltd. for the lease of 2,000 computer terminals to be used in a new lottery.

Ray Beauchemin, director of public relations, said no bids were asked for because General Instrument was the only company in Canada that had the system to meet the requirements.

"We will start with about 500 terminals for the first draw in November, which means they will have to be in place and operating by September.

"We will then gradually increase the number of terminals until we have about 2,000 operating across Canada."

Beauchemin said that under the new lottery, a player will deposit $1 and tell the ticket agent what number he wants. He will then be given a ticket with the number he selected on it.

If there are several players with the same winning number, the money is divided equally. Top prize in the lottery is $500,000.

Beer Strike Talks Resume

Negotiations resumed today in Vancouver in an effort to resolve a contract dispute which has shut down the B.C. brewery industry.

The talks adjourned a week ago to allow union workers to attend a convention in Toronto.

A strike began about three weeks ago at Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver and eight days ago employees at Molson's in Vancouver, Labatt's in Victoria and New Westminster and Columbia brewery in Creston were locked out.

As a result about 1,200 brewery workers are off the job. More than 4,000 hotel industry employees have also been affected as a number of beer parlors have had to close or drastically reduce their working hours.

One of the major issues in the dispute has been the union's refusal to bargain with a newly-organized brewery association. The employees want to negotiate with the companies on an individual basis.

VSO Reels, But Shows Go On

The Victoria Symphony Society will stage a series of costly open-air concerts this summer despite city aldermen's refusal Thursday to provide additional funding.

Symphony manager Jean Hunter said today she is still reeling from the rebuke she recieved from Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Murray Glazier and Bill Tindall.

"I feel like a Mack truck has hit me these days," she said.

"We're going to have to proceed — the commitments are all made."

She said the society will experience an estimated $25,000 shortfall over the summer unless some other source of funding is found.

She said the city had been the first place to look for the necessary money because the symphony pays about $26,000 a year to Victoria for use of the Royal Theatre.

The city's finance committee turned down the symphony when it asked for the grant to help offset the $66,000 cost of the concerts.

Young said he was "shocked and horrified" by the symhony's $116,000 deficit, and could see no way Victoria would pour any more money into the society under present circumstances.

Hunter said the criticisms levelled by Young and the aldermen were unfair and uncalled for because the society was not asking for funding far into the future, but merely wanted to be helped through the summer months.

"They were confused, or perhaps they deliberately confused the issue," said Hunter.

She was especially critical of Glazier, who attacked the symphony representatives for coming before the committee without a full financial statement.

"I met with Ald. Glazier prior to the meeting for a briefing and brought everything he told me to bring. Then he shot the rug out from under me. He was just playing politics — they all were."

Hunter said the next stop for symphony fund-raisers will be the Capital Regional Board.

"We will proceed with our cap in our hand and see what happens," she said.

"What we are saying is that we should provide the facilities outside of Vancouver so we can shift these people away, hopefully on a voluntary basis but if not, then we will force them out to get them away from alcohol, drugs and prostitution."

Vander Zalm said physical force would not be used but refusal to move and take advantage of new opportunities would mean likely being cut off welfare.

Asked if those moving would just take problems and accompanying vices with them, Vander Zalm said critics might call this a valid objection.

"But these people need different treatment, counselling, job opportunities and above all else, a different environment. We are trying to get at those who might be saved from a miserable life and who, if they are moved away from a bad environment, can become very useful and happy people."

Vander Zalm said new regulations would have to be approved by the federal government, which pays half of B.C.'s welfare costs.

The report recommends the food industry do a better job of explaining its distribution system to the public.

Bawtree said the industry seems surprised that the public is suspicious of the way the food chain operates.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said allegations that some food processors are forced to pay kickbacks to large grocery chain stores are under investigation by the combines investigation branch.

He was replying in the Commons Thursday to Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton Melville) who said there is evidence that one canned food processor has been forced to pay 10-per-cent higher kickbacks to Dominion stores than to A and P stores.

Nystrom cited this case after Allmand said the practice of making these payments — he called them rebates — is not illegal if they are offered to all stores on an equal basis.

Nystrom said cases have been presented to an Ontario legislature committee currently investigating such allegations.

He said a dairy has paid Dominion kickbacks as high as 26 per cent. Loblaws had set up a separate company called Intersave to collect such payments and he asked for a tax department inquiry.

Albertans Seen Pipe Winners

Alberta may get the lion's share of economic benefits from the natural gas pipeline unless the B.C. government matches Edmonton's concessions to industries, CP Air president Ian Gray said in Victoria Thursday.

He said the Alberta government is enticing industries with special concessions and, in addition, has the advantage of having no provincial sales tax.

For example, Gray said, CP Air would like to expand its airplane engine repair plant at Vancouver International Airport, a project which could add more than 100 permanent jobs to the local economy.

However, there are indications an engine-repair plant may be constructed at Edmonton, making expansion here not economically feasible.

Gray said he hopes to hold discussions soon with B.C.'s economic development minister, Don Phillips, to see what concessions might be available.

In general terms, he said, he hoped the B.C. government would create an economic atmosphere similar to Alberta's.

Airplane engine repairs will be an expanding business once pipeline construction begins, he said.

At the present time, the only plane engine repair plants are in Montreal, Vancouver and a small one in Winnipeg.

Gray said CP Air repairs engines for many companies and this business could grow if the Sea-Island plant could be expanded.

"When we meet with Mr. Phillips, our question will be: What can you do for us?"

On other topics, Gray said CP Air hoped to hold the line on air fares for more than one year, except for passing through increases in the price of fuel.

He said business is expanding rapidly, thanks to the success of late-night and off-peak flights.

For example, the courier plane between Vancouver and Toronto is carrying more passengers than expected, despite the fact it takes all night to get there. The plane leaves Vancouver at 9:45 p.m. and gets to Toronto at 6:40 a.m., after several stops along the way.

Gray said the low rates available on this service are attracting people who have never flown before and who otherwise might have gone by bus.

The success of the cut-rate trip has been a complete surprise, he said.

Gray said traffic volumes are up across the board, much to the surprise of his company and most other airlines.

The airline business has suddenly become profitable again, although there is a constant concern about petroleum costs.

In the aftermath of the oil crisis of 1974, CP Air laid off about 1,000 employees and has held its staff level at around 6,700 ever since. The company does not expect this level to increase in the near future.

"We learned we had to reduce our overhead and we have done that."

A few remaining departments might be slightly overstaffed but these would be reduced "graciously", he said, with early retirement programs or simply waiting for someone to reach retirement age and then not replacing him.

CUSTOMS ROLLERS ALL LOSE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Customs officials who used a baggage carousel at Winnipeg International Airport as a giant roulette wheel have all been declared losers.

Andy R. Lodge, regional collector of customs for Revenue Canada, said Thursday each of the players and the man in charge of customs at the airport on June 4 have been given one-day suspensions without pay.

"Customs blew it," he said. "This should not have happened, and it has resulted in us taking a close look at our airport services."

The low-stakes roulette game came to public attention after the pilot of an executive jet from Phoenix, Ariz., landed at the airport and requested customs service on the ramp north of the passenger terminal.

An airport employee said the pilot was told to come inside for inspection and discovered several customs personnel playing roulette on the baggage carousel.

'The Pain Was Unbearable...'

LONDON (AP) — The moonshine that got two British construction workers flogged in Saudi Arabia was so strong "it would burn your lips," one of them said Thursday.

Brian Cooper said the brew of sugar, yeast and water he and Nigel Maidment worked up in an illicit still at the Saudi town of Ha'il "was pretty potent stuff, well over 100 proof; you had to water it down or it would burn your lips."

Cooper, 35, and Maidment, 27, said they knew they were breaking Saudi Arabia's prohibition laws but they had no ide of the severities of the penalty.

They were convicted last December, served five months in prison and then reduced their jail term by agreeing to 70 strokes each from a bamboo cane.

"You just stood with your fists clenched, thinking, 'You can cut me in half, but I won't scream out,'" said Cooper.

"We just gritted our teeth and blacked out our heads. We were concentrating on keeping still and not showing how much it hurt. They wanted to belittle us and we weren't going to let them."

"The pain was unbearable when they hit you in the same place more than once," said Maidment. "That was the really hard part to take."

Evacuation Set

LONDON (AP) — A British military force is being readied to evacuate whites and blacks from Rhodesia if guerrilla warfare escalates and causes chaos there, Foreign Secretary David Owen said Thursday.

Owen said the rescue force would be ready to go into action on short notice, but there is no immediate expectation it will be needed.

The force is composed of a battalion of troops, paratroops and aircraft, Owen said. It is receiving training on how to evacuate civilians and how to secure an airfield to be used for rescue work.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith declared the country independent of British rule in 1965 to head off black rule. Smith and three black moderate leaders agreed in March to a plan for majority rule by the end of the year, but black nationalist guerrilla leaders have rejected the plan and vowed to step up the six-year old war.

Just Common Clay After All?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Bible says God created man out of clay. Now a group of U.S. space scientists says that life may have, in fact, started in common clay 3.5 billion years ago alongside some ancient ocean.

"I have a feeling that (the first living thing) might have been about half clay," Dr. James Lawless of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Centre said Thursday. "I'm not sure we would have recognized it as life."

Lawless said the metal-laden clays may have acted as catalysts to help stack life's building blocks — amino acids and nucleotides.

The theoretical recipe for life, as developed by scientists during the last two decades, includes a base of simple chemicals — hydrogen, water vapor, carbon dioxide, methane gas and ammonia. All are believed to have been present in the earth's primordial atmosphere.

The base was created when the chemicals fell into the ocean, floating into steaming hot tide pools, where the chemicals were shuffled over and over again in a chain of evaporation out of and condensation into the sea.

As the ages passed, nucleotides somehow linked together into chains of DNA, the substance that carries the genetic code throughout each organism and from generation to generation.

The amino acids formed chains of their own and became proteins. Among many vital functions, proteins oversee the chemical processes of life.

Somewhere in the theoretical process, something was able to transfer the genetic code and reproduce itself.

The gap in the theory is an inability to explain how the building blocks, spread ever so thinly through the oceans, could be concentrated enough to permit stacking into more complex substances.

Lebanese Christians Digging In

BINT JBAIL, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli-backed Christian forces in southern Lebanon defied Lebanese government orders Thursday to turn over their positions to UN troops and confine themselves to their barracks.

"Never, never," said an officer, acting as a spokesman for the Christian Lebanese forces. "We will never relinquish our positions to the UN forces. They cannot defend our folks here. And we will never permit the so-called legitimate Lebanese army to replace us here. That army is definitely controlled by the Syrians."

Israeli occupation forces have completed their withdrawal from the 130-square-kilometre (500-square-mile) area captured in southern Lebanon during an invasion that began March 15. The Israelis turned over a number of key positions to the 5,134-man UN Interim Force in Lebanon but relinquished a 6.2-kilometre (four-mile) wide strip along the border to the Christian forces.

Premier Salim el Hoss ordered the Christian forces to relinquish their positions to UN troops and stay in the barracks or be branded as renegades.

"We will obey orders issued by the Lebanese Front only," said the Christian officer, referring to a conglomeration of Christian militias opposed to the leftist-Palestinian coaltion. "We are not renegades. We are the true Lebanese."

Syrian troops make up the bulk of the 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force that ended the civil war 19 months ago.

"The Syrians must leave Lebanon," the spokesman said. "Neither the Christian forces here nor the Israelis will accept a Syrian-influenced Lebanese army in south Lebanon."

In Damascus, Syria's governmemt-controlled media charged that the defiance by the Christian forces and the murder Tuesday in northern Lebanon of the son of former president Suleiman Franjieh are "part of a plot to partition Lebanon" into Christian and Moslem halves.

Damascus radio cautioned that the "overall plot is designed to undermine the security of Lebanon and Syria." It urged the Lebanese government and the Syrian peacekeeping forces to handle the conspirators with "utmost firmness."

Not So Academic

The new Forests Act now being debated in the legislature is, everyone agrees, one of the most important bills to come before the house in recent years. The legislation will have far-reaching effects on B.C.'s largest industry, forestry, for at least the next 25 years and probably for much longer.

The bill undoubtedly contains a number of highly controversial measures, chief among them being a series of clauses that almost certainly will expand the oligopoly position of the eight major forest companies.

Yet the bill poses no political threat whatsoever to the government. There will be no mass rallies to protest its controversial clauses. There will be no petitions urging amendments to it. The politicians probably will receive hardly a single letter dealing with it.

The reason for this is simple. The bill is so complicated that almost no one other than forestry experts can understand it. By the time the average member of the public has poked his way through a few pages full of timber licences, timber sales licences (which are not at all the same thing), mill licences, tree farm licences, public sustained yield units and annual allowable cuts, he is going to abandon the whole bill as quite beyond his comprehension.

Neither is the bill going to affect him directly. Unlike the new assessment legislation which had a direct and painful effect on his tax notice, unlike the new transit act which is going to hit his property taxes or his electricity bills or the price he pays for gasoline, he really can't see the reason behind demands for more security of the lumber supply or demands for public hearings before the renewal of tree farm licences. Unless he works in the forest industry, it all seems a bit academic.

Yet, as Liberal leader Gordon Gibson pointed out quite clearly in the legislature, the question is really not academic at all. Wrong decisions now could mean a serious unemployment problem in the forest industry a few years down the road.

The bill has been available to the public for barely a month yet, and some major amendments have been made public for only a couple of days. Little public input has been received, but the government is hoping to pass it within the next few days. This is too fast for such a complicated and important piece of legislation.

Let the government leave the bill unpassed for a few months. Let it spend some time this summer trying to get as many people as possible to understand at least the main points. And let the public realize that, complicated as it is, it is an essential piece of legislation and make an effort to learn about it and offer public reaction to the government.

Setting an Example

The Anti-Inflation Board has the answer to soaring food prices and the continuing high rate of inflation. The solution is to ask for higher wages. Just for AIB staff, that is.

Other Canadians are bound by guidelines of a maximum six per cent pay increase — some Canadians, because of AIB rollbacks, are getting even less in this last year under wage controls. But new AIB chairman Harold Renouf has asked the government for a bigger pay packet that averages out to 11.5 per cent more money for each of his 635 civil servants.

There's more to this lovely tale of bureaucratic inflation. Besides exceeding its own guidelines, the AIB is demanding more pay for less work. While Renouf told the House of Commons finance committee of his demand for more money for his staff, Sylvia Ostry was announcing across town her new inflation monitoring agency, the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity.

Which will have its own staff of 75 and its own $3 million budget, while Renouf will spend $12 million over at the AIB, with his staff of several hundred.

The new centre officially replaced the AIB on Thursday, as agreed by the prime minister and the premiers at the last federal-provincial conference in February, but the AIB will continue to operate until well into 1980.

Accept that empire-building is the single natural talent of bureaucracies. Accept that Parkinson's Law is the only unbreakable rule of government. But the joke stops at the semantic shadow-boxing of Ostry and Renouf with the definition of inflation.

They suggest that food and energy should not be used in calculating the rate of inflation, since these are not part of the "underlying" rate of inflation and thus do not reflect true trends in prices and costs that affect production.

Tell that to the head of a household who has to buy food to feed a family and pay for heating oil to keep the house warm. The ensuing laughter at least will cheer all of us for a little while.

How can Canada lick inflation in the economy when the bureaucrats in Ottawa who are in charge of coming to grips with inflation have a concept of the problem radically different from the average Canadian? And are so cosily insulated from any of the real effects of inflation that have eroded the savings and earning power of non-bureaucrats? No wonder the national capital is known as Fat City.

Not a Monster!

The introduction of Bill 19 (Urban Transit Authority Act) by the minister of municipal affairs is not a blessing. The only feature on the positive side is that it remoes transit from Hydro.

On the negative side, the change builds in the creation of two more levels of bureaucratic involvement thus producing in the region of 3,000 additional) nonproductive jobs. These, of course, will entail:

Increased public debt, increased taxes, increased fares, increased fragmentation, increased delays in decisions and procedures.

Reduced action, reduced efficiency and service, ultimate collapse of the system.

As things are, routes and services are not where people are, or want to go, but figments of what is convenient to the officers and staff as the least disruption of their day. Sometims it seems to be tht the attitude is "the public be damned."

In this instance, the NDP appears to be perfectly correct in its concern and suspicion of the sagasity, motives, intentions and methods of all the persons involved. Another monster we do not need! — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

B.C.? Not Here

Thank you for Fred Cleverley's article French and the Constitution in your issue of June 9. It is quite the best I have read on Manitoba's ancient Official Languages Act, which caused such a stir many years ago.

Having said that it is hoped that you will not consider it nitpicking to point out one error, which was probably just a slip of the pen. In his final paragraph it is stated: "But the decision, if it is binding on Manitoba, will be equally binding on other Canadian provinces." Actually, only Manitoba and Quebec are affected as none of the others received bilingual status when formed. I mention this only for fear that some British Columbians might get the wind up if they thought we were also involved. There is, of course, Ottawa's Official Languages Act but that deals with matters under federal jurisdiction only. — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Bureaucracy

James Barber's column The Canadian Way reprinted in the Times June 7 was excellent in disclosing, in a most humorous style, the bureaucratic bungling that evolves when governments become involved in solving simple problems. Each supposed solution they provide creates more problems that have to be resolved. Could this not be a job security policy and the reason why the civil service has had such rapid growth over the past decade? A kind of a make-work mentality.

Nobel prize-winning economist Milton Friedman, concerned that everyone in government wants to do good with someone else's money, has proposed an eleventh amendment to the U.S. Bill of Rights: Everyone should be free to do good, at his own expense. — J. J. Gibson, 260 Michigan Street.

California's Prop. 13: It May Bring Boom — or Bust

By TOM WICKER

LOS ANGELES — While claiming victory in the Republican gubernatorial primary here the other night, Attorney-General Evelle Younger told a cheering crowd of supporters: "I've just seen Jerry Brown on television, and he's looking more and more like Howard Jarvis."

The cheering turned to laughter, because Younger's supporters were happily aware that Proposition 13, the tax-limiting brainchild of the 75-year-old Jarvis, had caught Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in a political dilemma. Having first failed to get property tax relief through the legislature, then having fought Proposition 13 for months — while Younger endorsed it — the governor had just seen the tax amendment approved by an overwhelming 65 per cent of a huge turnout of Californians.

The instant political cliche here became: "The people have spoken." And beginning that night, Brown has been giving the strong impression of a man listening hard. He even made some effort to claim at least a midwife's role in the birth of Proposition 13; it was, he said, a development of the "spirit of austerity" he had brought into office in 1975, when he refused to live in the governor's mansion and rejected the usual limousine.

Trailed in Survey

The hard fact, nevertheless, was that Brown actually emerged from primary day trailing Evelle Younger by four points in a survey by The Los Angeles Times of voters leaving the polls; that would have been unthinkable only a month or so ago and can only be attributed to the tide of sentiment for Proposition 13. In fact, analysts here are saying, had the initiative been on the ballot in November at the regular elections instead of the June primary, it might well have swept Brown and the Democrats out of office.

No wonder then that Brown and his aides now are approaching "the new revolution" wrought by Proposition 13 as what one of them termed "a high risk opportunity." Not just for the good of the state but for his own political future, the governor has to find a way to offset the loss of $7 billion in property tax revenues with as little dislocation as possible. That's not going to be easy, particularly since no one really knows what the consequences of that loss will be.

The economist Arthur Laffer, for example, believes the tax limitation will go a long way toward revitalizing California's economy by enhancing the business climate, putting billions of dollars of tax savings in the hands of consumers, and thus creating new jobs and more investment. He even doubts that total tax revenues will fall as much as predicted, since he believes property values should rise, stimulating new construction and expanding the property tax base, while greater business activity boosts sales and income tax receipts.

No New Taxes

That seems distinctly a minority view. Taking the opposite tack, major school district leaders and the teachers' union are hoping to get another initiative on the November ballot, this one exempting industrial and commercial properties from the new limit of one per cent of valuation. If that passed, the limit would apply only to homeowners and about two-thirds of the $7 billion in lost revenues could be recovered at a stroke. Politically, however, the initiative might look like an attempt to evade rather than comply with the wishes of 65 per cent of the voters; and in Los Angeles it might be fatally tagged as an amendment to pay for busing, due to begin in September by federal court order.

Even less likely anytime soon are new or increased taxes, since both were plainly what the people voted against; Brown is already on record against trying to meet the crisis that way. Eventually, however, a city like Los Angeles, which now imposes no income tax on its residents or workers, may have to move in that direction to offset lost property tax revenues.

It's possible, though, that a combination of reduced services and flexible disbursements from the state's inflation-generated income tax surplus — now $5 billion, with an estimated $2 billion recurring annually — may produce a politically acceptable form of "austerity government." If so, there won't be much, if any, room in it for such controversial social programs as affirmative action, and the last public employees hired — mostly minorities and women — are likely to be the first fired.

Impending here, in fact, is a test for both liberal and conservative theories of government. Is it true that modern society makes "big government" — with its welfare and social programs, high costs and huge bureaucracies — inevitable? Or, as conservatives have long claimed, is "big government" really just a gravy train for politicians and bureaucrats? Will the people really accept drastically reduced services in exchange for lower taxes? Can private sector arrangements compensate for diminished government social programs? Or will truly essential services in fact have to be reduced? California may be about to learn some of the answers.

But What Happens if They're Right?

By RICHARD GWYN

OTTAWA — The impulsive, uninformed and self-indulgent decision by California voters to cut their property taxes by half has left bobbing behind it one unsettling subject for speculation. What if the voters are right?

Before the vote on Proposition 13, a CBS poll showed that 70 per cent of Californians believed that less government spending would not lead to a reduction in essential public services: This attitude, wrote columnist Joseph Kraft, "flew in the face of common sense."

Before the vote, the authorities warned that its effects would be disastrous. Thirty-seven thousand civil servants would be laid off, said Los Angeles county officials. One in three teachers would have to be dismissed, said educational leaders.

Since the vote, these predictions have changed curiously. Only 10,000 civil servants may need to be laid off, Los Angeles county officials now estimate. No teachers may have to be dismissed, say educational leaders, if enough programs of "limited interest" can be eliminated.

The implications are awesome. The $7 billion cut required by Proposition 13 is quite arbitrary. Suppose, though, that governments can accommodate this reduction quite easily. Suppose that few essential services have to be cut, other than those deliberately selected by the bureaucracy to punish the voters. Suppose, the scariest question of all, the impulsive, uninformed and self-indulgent California voters turn out to be right?

The implications of these implications are even more awesome. The disease may prove infectious. In the U.S., the Massachusetts legislature next week debates a motion to limit state revenues to a fixed amount, with all excess to be returned to taxpayers. In Canada, our system doesn't permit this kind of uncontrolled participatory democracy.

Awesome Implications

Our closest equivalent is Manitoba, where Premier Sterling Lyon is actually doing what he was elected to do — reduce government spending rather than merely restrain the rate of growth. Will all other Canadian governments have to go where Lyon has already gone?

Probably not. Probably the taxpayers' revolt will be no more durable than was the anti-machinery campaign of the 19th centry Luddites in England, or, a closer equivalent, the anti-tax protests of the French Poujadists in the 1950s.

Just possibly, though, Proposition 13 will turn out to be one of those events we'll look back on later and say: "There, that's when things really began to change."

The immediate and evident targets of the populists, or of the mob, are high taxes and big government. Their less tangible but more important target is the entire liberal ethic.

In the early 1960s, the liberals became the establishment. Out went Dwight Eisenhower and his business buddies; in came John F. Kennedy and the best and the brightest. In Canada, and indeed throughout the west, liberals assumed positions of power and opinion-making influence, in politics, in the bureaucracy, in educational institutions and in the media.

The liberals believed in progress. They believed in reason. They believed in expertise — in the social sciences to figure out what to do and in the Harvard Business School to figure out how to do it. The liberals believed in government. They believed in education. They believed, most of all, in themselves.

The returns on a decade and a half of liberal stewardship now are in. Spending on education has soared; seldom have educational standards been more widely criticized. Spending on government has soared; citizens' incomes are as maldistributed as ever and unemployment, the core liberal economic justification for government spending, is at its highest since the Depression.

This indictment is too harsh. Medicare is a shining example of inspired government spending. In self-help provided to minorities and to the disadvantaged, in actions to protect the environment, in the support of cultural creativity, liberals deployed the taxpayers monies for ends that were, and are, as imaginative as they are essential.

Yet the doubts, reinforced by memories of radical chic, endure. Given the easy money times during which they governed, the record of the liberals was mediocre. They solved few social problems except their own — as today's affluence of bureaucrats and educators demonstrates.

Perhaps the real failure of the liberals was to fail to come to terms with what the philosopher Ivan Illich has called "bureaucratic tutelage." Government institutions in order to prosper and to expand perpetually invent new public needs in the name of "the public interest;" they keep citizens in tutelage by transforming them into dependents.

Needs Invented

Kraft has dismissed the California phenomenon as "middle class greed." True, but it's a response, no matter how mean-spirited its motivation, to the greed of those who want taxpayers' money spent on the institutions that happen to employ them.

Here's the rub in the affair. The liberal ideology of throwing money at problems has lost all credibility. The California voters thus are right. They, and the millions who think like them are dead wrong if, now that the politicians are panicking, they try to substitute for the philosophy of liberalism the philosophy of greed.

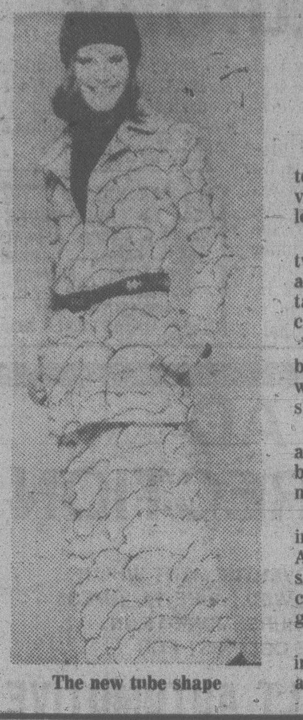
Women Growing More Like Men

By ROBIN LUSTIG
London Observer



The new tube shape

British women are becoming tube-shaped, according to an unpublished survey carried out by a firm with a vested interest in human contours — Berlei, the country's leading manufacturer of women's foundation garments.

After measuring more than 4,000 women over a two-year period, Berlei has discovered that the traditional "egg timer" shape is no longer an accurate representation of its typical customer. These days she more closely resembles a somewhat thickened broom handle.

In the last 25 years, according to Berlei, women have become taller, with smaller busts and hips but large waists. "You could almost say they're becoming man-shaped," a spokesman (male) said last week.

The increase in women's average height was already a well-established fact when the survey was carried out, but the straightening of the curves is apparently a newly-observed phenomenon.

The Berlei findings differ from those of a similar investigation carried out in the U. S. by Sears, Roebuck. Accordng to Sears, American women are growing smaller busts and fatter waists, just like their British counterparts — but the American hip is increasing in girth rather than diminishing.

The new Sears size 10, with previous measurements in brackets, is 34½-inch (35) bust, 26-inch (25) waist and and 36½ (36) hips.

Professor Desmond Morris, author of The Naked Ape, believes that changes in women's shapes are probably due largely to changes in their life style. "The life patterns of men and women have become more similar over the years, so the difference in their shapes has lessened accordingly." he says.

The explanation for smaller busts and hips, however, is harder to find. It could be due to changes in child-bearing and feeding habits, or even to hormonal changes caused by food additives or the contraceptive pill. (According to the Berlei survey, however, 53 per cent of women taking the pill say it makes no difference to the size of their bust, while 43 per cent says the pill enlarges it.)

As women become more active and do more of the things that traditionally only men did, it is only to be expected that their physique should change, says Prof. Morris. There was a time when men did a lot of running as they hunted for food — hence large chests to house well-developed lungs — while women bore and fed children, hence large hips and busts.

But that was thousands of years ago. Changes in shape over the last two decades or so can hardly be due to genetic adaptations over the centuries. What remains true is that men today do less running and women do less child-bearing. And their shapes, somewhat disconcertingly, are becoming more and more alike.

A Revolt By the Press

THE NATION
An Editorial

What could just possibly grow into a revolutionary event seems to be taking place in New York City on a thriving, contentious sheet called The Village Voice. Its present owner, Rupert Murdoch, an Australian press lord with vast publishing interests here and there, let one of his minions fire its editor over a policy dispute. The staff, in formidable numbers organized itself to quit en masse unless the firing was annulled. A mere proprietor could not tell them who was boss.

That brought a pause, followed by a rethinking. There were new calculations. Stasis set in. At this writing the old editor is still in place, though that could change if the owner is ready to face the music. That, of course, is more Murdoch's problem than the public's.

The daily press of New York — all three of it — has another problem. It might be called Discretion. Or Contagion. What if their own workers were to be infected with the notion that they had a say in who was to be boss? So the solution was to keep quite mum. That came naturally to the city's only evening paper, the Post, for the reason that Murdoch owns it. The two morning papers had a somewhat rougher time with a problem that bordered on the ethical. The paper with the largest circulation, the News, faced it manfully; it killed a column on the subject by Pete Hamill, a Voice alumnus. The New York Times printed a discreet item, reporting that one of its own men had been hired as the new Voice editor, and gingerly followed the story as it developed with brief accounts on inside pages.

The resistance of The Village Voice's professional staff (and not just the writers, the business side signed up in droves) will not light a powder train against the whims of publishers across the U.S. We have no tradition yet for this kind of thing, unfortunately. In Europe, partly as a result of the restarting of a free press after the Nazis were kicked out, the idea that the people who actually make the newspaper should have some control of its content and management has taken firm hold. Here, the press is increasingly enchained, conglomeratized and homogenized. In just a few years a handful of multimedia corporations will be almost alone in the field of communications.

That will produce a kind of press the Founders could never have imagined as they wrote the First Amendment. All the more reason to wish the staff of The Village Voice well as they fight for their editorial independence.

Horner Polarizes Politics in Alberta

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — In terms of federal electoral support only Alberta compares with Quebec in a consistent bent of favoring one party over all others. Thereafter, resemblance disappears.

Quebec has overwhelmingly favored the Liberals (and thus the governing party) since the turn of the century. Even the minor aberrations of '35 and '58 only point up this favoritism. Alberta voters since 1908, when there were Alberta seats for the first time, have only four times in 20 general elections chosen more government-supporting MPs than others — in 1908, in 1917, in 1958 and 1962. Sixteen times, Albertans have voted for federal parties and elected more MPs (usually many more MPs) into opposition. And on 10 of those times, the majority of the MPs have represented third or fourth parties, not the two old parties.

Such data tell us that Albertans are not in a party pattern found elsewhere in Canada. It indicates they tend to be more homogeneous in political outlook than other Canadians, and that it has never been terribly appealing to them to get on the government's side. This latter is one of the oldest of partisan pitches made by confident government parties. Of course, it has been of special interest this past year in Alberta because the twin argument of the Liberals, since Jack Horner switched to the government side in early '77, has been that Trudeau was a certainty in the coming election, and Alberta simply must continue to have representation in the cabinet (i.e. Horner) and some more weight in the Liberal caucus.

HORNER
. . . who's the renegade?

One of Alberta's 19 seats is held by Joe Clark. Horner the Defector is the only non-Tory MP from Alberta. In the next election Alberta will have 22 seats. While no one has anticipated drastic Tory losses, there was a feeling in midwinter that Horner and his mooted recruiting drive, and the low popular state of Clark and the Tories across Canada, meant a Liberal upswing, certainly a hard test at home for Clark.

Several other items of politics were in the swirl. For example, the anti-Clark antics of Stan Schumacher, a friend of Horner who outpushed Clark for a redistributed riding, then lost his own nomination. For example, the rumors that Premier Lougheed and his ministry were not happy with Clark's federal performance. For example, the Clark record against hanging, when Albertans seem more in favor of hanging than any other Canadians.

Where do federal politics in Alberta stand at the moment with Trudeau and Liberals flat or, more fairly, stalled nationally, and with Clark, himself, looking stronger nationally, more like a man who just might become prime minister?

It seems clear Horner has not been able to recruit any outstanding candidates, whereas the Tories have nominated three good ones in David Kilgour (John Turner's brother-in-law), Bill Yurko, a minister in the Alberta cabinet, and John Thompson, a prominent oil industry figure.

Horner remains in difficulty in his own riding (a new one) up against young Tory MP Arnold Malone. Horner's sister, Jean Roen, has stuck with Malone.

One friend of Horner has told me that the delay of the election is likely to help Horner, largely because a June or early July vote would have lost him the riding. With more time, more judicious use of his ministerial power, and his own vigorous presence in the province, he may be able to turn the riding around.

My source says there's been a remarkable, almost total polarization in the area. On the one side, the "down with the turncoat" mob (which seems larger); on the other side, the loyalists who have sworn, and still swear, by Jack Horner. Horner insists locally that he's still a Conservative, that Trudeau is too, that Clark is renegade to Conservative principles. One man told me he knows of four families in the Hardisty area who have split over Horner, husband against wife, and father against sons.

Lougheed has helped lift Clark a bit by being so often, so consistently stressing Alberta in provincial and regional terms. He's wiped himself out as a prospective federal leader without in any way seeming to be critical or denigrating of Clark. Here it is worth remembering that never in modern times has Alberta had a governing party of the same stripe as the one governing in Ottawa. A Clark-Lougheed combination would be unique.

If Clark brings it about in the next year it will almost certainly mean that behind him from Alberta will be most of the dozen incumbent Tory MPs who'll be running again.

U.S. to Probe Effect of TV Ads on Children

By TOM SHALES
The Washington Post

Only in America would you find (a) so many sentences that begin, "Only in America" and (b) a motorized bed advertised on television as providing "the most exciting way to relax."

Just what we needed — an exciting way to relax. The only thing better would be a mortuary advertising "the most exciting way to rest in peace."

Television viewers, it might be assumed, have as much or more fun laughing at such ads as they have trying to laugh with TV shows like "Laverne and Shirley," where the comic aspects are more oblique.

We have learned how to decipher ads, or so we may think, and even how to withstand them — except perhaps during those long holiday weeekends when Joe Blow's Carpet Barn takes the trouble to tell us about its 18-hour sale aproximately every 18 minutes. During these stretches of pure hell-on-earth, it's hard to keep from setting fire to one's own carpet out of a mad quest for revenge.

The fact of the matter is, however, that not all TV viewers are created equally impervious to the devious ploys of TV commercials. The younger a viewer is, the most vulnerable.

This is one reason why the Federal Trade Commission's proposed inquiry into ads directed at children is not in any way out of order, as vociferous critics of it have claimed, nor somehow an act of sacrilege against the gods of capitalism.

After all, the FTC has only proposed hearings, not necessarily any new regulation. If Congress can permit the Pentagon to study the aerodynamics of the Frisbee, it can allow the FTC to study the effects of TV ads on children.

Why was there such fuss and dudgeon in Congress over the FTC's plan to study this subject? The answer is painfully and rather shamefully obvious: the broadcasting industry maintains one of the strongest and most pervasive lobbies in town.

Industry flacks went after public opinion while the lobbyists took care of Congress, denouncing even the thought of proposing such a study. Somehow this doesn't seem like a very enlightened atmosphere for debate on anything; the FTC study may have been justified merely by the vehemence with which the forces of the status quo have attacked it.

The nature of advertising has been changed tremendously by and through television. Advertising is no longer anything so simple as a statement of claims of superiority by one product over its competitors, though examples of this still exist.

Not even kids would swallow the argument, after all, that a Snickers bar is nutritionally, chemically or morally superior to a Three Musketeers. Mention the word nutrition in an ad, anyway, and you risk terrorizing the little darlings into doing something so rash as going outside to play.

Most TV commercials today try to associate products with varying states of emotional, physical and psychological well-being without actually claiming, in so many words, that the product will bring these states about. In so many pictures it can be done much more efficiently and without the risk of actually lying.

Ads today tend to deal less in word associations than in image associations, something that may be very scientifically designed, yet hard to analyze in concrete ways when seen on the air.

When you put marbles in a bowl of soup to make the vegetables rise to the top — as was done in one classic FTC false ad claims case — you are lying about the soup. This is clear enough. But if you show a man in a three-piece suit jumping for joy on the sidewalk after having consumed a bowl of said soup, you are not really claming anything that can be disproved.

Thus the whole regulatory posture of the FTC regarding "truth in advertising" is becoming more and more out of date where TV commercials are concerned. This was spelled out eloquently for all the world to read five years ago in a landmark book on media manipulation, The Responsive Chord, by Tony Schwartz, a veteran ad man who designed the now legendary little-girl-with-daisy-and-H-Bomb ad for Lyndon B. Johnson's 1964 presidential campaign against Barry Goldwater. Schwartz's fans include Marshall McLuhan.

Schwartz wrote in Responsive Chord that "from the FTC point of view, 'telling the truth' should be the least important social concern. If electronic communication deals with effects, then government agencies responsible for safeguarding the public well-being should concern themselves with understanding the effects of a commercial, and preventing those effects that are not in the public interest.

"A recent television commercial for children's aspirin was 100 per cent truthful by the most rigid FTC standards, but the effect of the commercial was to make children feel that aspirin is something to take when they want to have a good time. The commercial clearly demonstrates that truth is a print ethic, not a standard for ethical behavior in electronic communication."

Advertising agencies have spent millions on behalf of their clients researching new avenues into the minds of the viewer, young and old. It only seems fair that the FTC spend some money to find out how children can be protected from these tactics and techniques, since they are our most uninformed consumer group.

Amalgamation Vote Saturday

DUNCAN — Residents of Duncan and North Cowichan go to the polls Saturday to decide if they will amalgamate after 66 years as separate municipalities.

Duncan split from North Cowichan in 1912 and rivalry has existed between the two communities despite frequent efforts at amalgamation.

The last attemp to vote on the issue a year ago was stopped by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, who felt the public was not adequately informed on the issue.

But this year he stepped in to order a vote after the two mayors informed him that North Cowichan council unanimously favored a referendum, although not all members favor amalgamation, and Duncan aldermen divided 3-3 on whether to hold a vote. Both mayors, George Whittaker of North Cowichan and Ken Paskin of Duncan, favor amalgamation.

An information ballot last November indicated ratepayers in Duncan and the south end of North Cowichan want to amalgamate but resident of south Cowichan (Chemainus) are opposed. Ald. Rex Hollett, a Chemainus resident and businessman, has threatened to lead his community out of any amalgamated municipality.

If amalgamation passes, an election would take place Nov. 18 to name a mayor and eight aldermen at large in the new community for two-year terms. Negotiations would be held with local governments and employee groups to develop an orderly re-organization of municipal staffs. No present full-time employee would lose seniority or job. There are 87 full-time employeees and 20 part-time workers in North Cowichan while Duncan employs a full-time staff of 30. North Cowichan's municipal employee payroll is $1,780,862 while Duncan's is $517,662.

Utitlities, debts and services would continue on an area basis until the new council decided otherwise.

Fire and police protection, now separate services, would be left to the new council but the north-end recreation area of North Cowichan would not become involved in the new community centre's program in Duncan. Duncan city hall has been proposed as the seat of an amalgamated government.

The province would provide a grant of $50 per capita based on a population of 20,017, a total of $1,000,850. The province would also pay the cost of policing in Duncan for five years.

Polling stations will be open Saturday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Duncan city hall, North Cowichan municipal hall, Chemainus United Church hall and Mount Prevost, Westholme, Crofton and Maple Bay schools.

A three-month campaign to increase the practice of Transcendental Meditation has started in Victoria.

Transcendental Meditation teacher James Hoggan said Wednesday the program will include community lectures, special courses and presentations to the provincial government, industries and businesses.

Hoggan said he and three other TM teachers will live in Victoria for three months while conducting the campaign to promote what he called an ideal society.

The project will be conducted at the same time in other major centres in B.C. and Quebec, Hoggan said.

He said 400 TM teachers from across Canada have been sent out to teach the technique to 100,000 people in each province.

About 7,000 people in Victoria currently practise TM and the figure is about 25,000 province-wide, he said.

The Beach Boys rock group and other celebrities who practise TM will be invited to Victoria to perform concerts and talk about the technique, Hoggan said.

Too Much, Too Slow, Survey on E&N Shows

NANAIMO (CP) — Passengers riding the CP Rail-operated Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway between Victoria and Courtenay on Vancouver Island are being charged too much for a train that runs too slow, says a union survey conducted on board the line.

The survey by the United Transportation Union, Local 1051, as well as the union's position on improvement of dayliner service, were released by spokesman John Cooper.

Cooper said the rail line has deteriorated to the point where the single self-propelled dayliner coach is travelling at less than 64 kilometres an hour, and CP Rail has failed to notify the public that the coach consistently runs 30 minutes late.

The union brief said CP Rail fares on the dayliner exceed those on similar runs the company operates.

The brief said overcrowded seating conditions and no Sunday service indicate CP Rail is making only "sporadic, minimal efforts" to comply with orders from the Canadian Transport Commission.

The order calls for the railway to provide an effective passenger service with adequate seating, a well-maintained physical plant and good advertising.

"Service is a misnomer in this case," said Cooper. "There is no service here at all."

Cooper said passengers are sometimes carried in the baggage section because of overcrowded seating.

He said the passengers have asked for improved service, more riding space, reduced fares and rail schedules synchronized with those of ferries heading to the mainland from Victoria and Nanaimo.

Colwood Youth Pleads Guilty to Driving Charge

An 18-year-old Colwood youth pleaded guilty in county court late Thursday as the prosecution prepared to close its case against him.

Scott MacLachan had been accused of criminal negligence causing the death of Joan Marshall, 56, of Colwood.

But with the prosecution's consent, the court accepted MacLachan's guilty plea to the lesser included offence of dangerous driving. He will be sentenced July 10.

Judge Montague Drake said the evidence indicated pretty strongly that at least the offence of dangerous driving had been committed and it was just that the guilty plea to the lesser offence be accepted.

MacLachan was driving his father's three-quarter-ton pickup truck when it went out of control on a sunny, dry afternoon May 4, 1977, striking and killing Mrs. Marshall, a pedestrian, on Sooke Road at Colwood Crescent.

Sgt. Michael Fjermestad, RCMP accident analyst for southern Vancouver Island, said it was his opinion from various facts and using certain calculations that the truck was travelling at 71 miles an hour.

The posted speed limit is 35 miles an hour and the accident occurred at the end of an S-bend.

He said the speed made the truck turn sideways and run off the near side of the road, striking Mrs. Marshall.

Earlier, Iris Jean Wright, 22, an eyewitness, said she saw the rear of the truck swing out and then hit Mrs. Marshall. She estimated the speed at about 60 miles an hour.

Barry Ross MacLachan, 17, brother of the accused, said he was in the truck and estimated the speed at 40 miles an hour.

Brenda Ricketts, driving west on Sooke Road, said the truck fishtailed, hit the pedestriam, jumped the sidewalk and rolled. She estimated the speed at 50 to 60 miles an hour.

Employers Sought

Employers in the Sooke school district wishing to hire a student for the summer should contact Ken Warren at the board office.

Warren said today he is looking for employers in the Langford-Metchosin-Colwood-Sooke area who have openings for students.

It's a difficult summer to find work and Warren says there are plenty of students capable of doing a variety of jobs.

Operator Bucks At Tally-Ho Move

Tally-Ho operator Daniel Arias says Victoria's city council needs some horse sense kicked into it.

And sometime in the near future he hopes to do just that by demonstrating to council that its decision to oust the tourist operation from its regular location is a big mistake.

The Tally-Ho has been ordered to move from its present stand opposite the Legislative Buildings to a new spot on the east side of Menzies, south of Bellville.

Arias says the move will put him out of business.

In an effort to press his point, he delivered a letter Thursday to council members inviting them to witness a trial run out of the new location, on a date to be set by city hall.

"If we have to move there, we'll close. We feel that strongly about it," said Arias.

He said no one knows for sure whether the Tally-Ho wagons will be as popular in the Menzies location, but he doubts it.

"That's what the trial run's for. We'll know easily enough in one day. I'll be the first to admit it if I'm wrong," he said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler ran into a problem in Victoria provincial court Thursday of how to add to a life sentence.

The dilema came up after 27-year-old Isaac Darryl Frank pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large March 27.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Frank, serving a life sentence imposed in November, 1967, for non-capital murder, faled to return from Comox after he was given a temporary pass to visit a sister there.

"What are you going to give me, life plus three months, or what?" asked Frank, who is serving his time at the B.C. Penitentiary on the Lower Mainland.

After noting that he had no case law to follow in this case, Ostler sentenced Frank to four months, to be served concurrently with his life term.

Persons convicted of non-capital or second-degree murder are eligible for parole after serving 10 years of a life sentence under the Criminal Code of Canada.

* * *

A 25-year-old man who told police he kicked in a window Friday morning because he was frustrated and depressed was handed a suspended sentence, placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 70 hours of community service work as well as pay restitution for the damage.

Reginald Bull, also known as Reginald Baptiste and Wayne Baptiste, 521 Simcoe, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Laughton said Bull and two female companions were stopped by Victoria city police at about 2 a.m. Friday in the 1200-block Government. Bull admitted to police he smashed a window valued at $250 at Pemberton Holmes Ltd., 1000 Government Street, because he was frustrated and depressed over not seeing his real parents for 18 years.

* * *

Ostler handed out concurrent sentences of three months, two months and one month to a 45-year-old man who had three previous drinking-driving convictions in the last three years.

Earl Barry Gibson, 1830 Island Highway, pleaded guilty to impaired driving, refusing to take a breath test and driving while suspended.

Laughton said Colwood RCMP noticed Gibson on Goldstream Avenue on April 24 when his Volkswagen mounted a curb and became stuck near the Westwind shopping centre.

Laughton also informed the court Gibson was convicted of impaired driving Oct. 2, 1975, in Victoria and fined $500, convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Aug. 25, 1976, in Delta and fined $250, and convicted again of impaired driving and driving while suspended Jan. 16, 1978, in Duncan and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Ostler handed out the three-month term for impaired driving, two months for driving under suspension and one month for refusing to take the breath test.

* * *

An 18-year-old Lake Cowichan youth was fined a total of $1,000 after two run-ins with Saanich police Friday morning.

Philip Martin Horn of North Shore Road in Lake Cowichan pleaded guilty to two counts of impaired driving and one count of driving while suspended.

Court was told Horn was picked up by Saanich police at 12:05 a.m. exceeding the speed limit on Union by 20 kmh.

Breath tests at the Saanich police station produced readings of .15 and .14, Laughton said, and Horn was handed a 24-hour driving suspension and released.

At 1:40 a.m., Saanich police saw Horn behind the wheel of a weaving vehicle on Lodge Avenue and stopped him again. This time, Laughton said, Horn's breath test readings were .13 both times.

Ostler, who decided to treat the entire incident as one continuing offence, fined Horn $400 on each of the impaired driving convictions and $200 for driving while suspended.

* * *

Also fined for drinking-driving were: Einar Alfred Lassfolk, 73, of 2261 Weiler, $400; Gordon Howard Olson, 22, of 7088 Wallace Drive, $400; Raymond Paul Crouch, 19, of Gold River, $400; and Kelly Gordon Orr, 19, of 742 Lampson, $100.

In addition, Orr was ordered to perform 60 hours of community service work.

Cause Of Fires Unknown

Saanich fire officials have completed their investigation into two overnight fires Monday that resulted in $80,000 damages — and have drawn a blank in pinpointing the cause in either case.

Fire Chief Art Fryer said there are suspicions one of the fires, which destroyed a garage, two sheds and a greenhouse at Jefferson and Torquay valued at $10,000, may have been deliberately set.

In the other fire, which resulted in $70,000 damages to a home at 1988 Woodley owned by Dr. James Bell, the cause could have been either an electrical failure or careless smoking, Fryer said.

Introducing the SUBARU BRAT.
FOUR WHEEL DRIVE!

The Subaru BRAT is a whole new kind of passenger car. You can shift from full-time front wheel drive to 4-wheel drive with the flick of a lever inside the car.

And if your idea of fun on the road is getting off the road, just shift into 4-wheel drive and head for the beach, the hills, or whatever part of the great outdoors you're into.

Subaru BRAT also delivers the kind of mileage most 4-wheel drive vehicles can't approach.

According to 1978 Transport Canada figures, the BRAT gets 69 highway and 50 city kilometers per gallon of regular gas.*

Many extras on other cars are standard on the BRAT, like AM push button radio. Tinted glass all round. Door-to-door carpeting. All-purpose radial tires. And of course our two outdoor bucket seats, a great place to park extra passengers.

The Subaru BRAT. Compact and easy to handle.

Murder Almost Undetected; Autopsy Cutback Blamed

A Vancouver murder would have gone undetected except for "an amazing coincidence", says MLA Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) who feels the attorney-general's ministry is at least partly to blame.

Lauk told the legislature Thursday a "cursory" autopsy on the victim missed the real cause of death. The autopsy wasn't thorough because a ministry memo told coroners to cut back on the number of full autopsies they order.

During question period, Lauk told the house of the death of Leroy Wannebo in a car accident in May last year in the Vancouver area.

Wannebo's body was taken from the accident scene and an autopsy performed. The conclusion was he died of head injuries suffered in the accident.

But a day and a half later, a tow truck driver noted blood splattered in the back of the car. Further investigation turned up bullet fragments.

A more thorough autopsy was then performed and it was determined Wannebo was murdered by a gunshot wound, and that his death was not related to the car accident.

The first autopsy did not include an x-ray which is one of the basic autopsy tests, Lauk said. An x-ray would have found the bullet fragments.

Lauk says this incident backs up his earlier charge that the cutback order from the ministry makes it possible for murders to be committed without anyone knowing about it.

Lauk, calling for the attorney-general to withdraw the memo, said there should be a full investigation of the ministry.

The memo tells coroners to cut back on the number of tests and autopsies as a money-saving measure, Lauk said.

Acting Attorney-General Allan Williams berated Lauk for presuming a murder had been committed and linking the incident to the memorandum on autopsies.

Williams said a complete examination of the victim's head was not possible because of the condition of the body.

Lauk said a murder charge had been laid by the Crown. He said the x-ray in the second more thorough autopsy had found bullet fragments.

Williams said the matter is still under investigation and he declined to comment further.

Bennett Urging Own Defeat?

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson says Premier Bill Bennett is advocating his own defeat.

In one of the lighter moments in the legislature Thursday, Gibson said he noted the premier is telling people suffering tax increases to "defeat high-spending politicians at the ballot box."

Gibson said the premier's office has increased its budget 127 per cent from 1975-76 fiscal year to the current year.

He asked Bennett if in view of this increase he included himself as one of the high-spending politicians who should be defeated.

Bennet retorted that the increase had been explained in the house before and it was too bad Gibson was off campaigning for a federal nomination and wasn't able to be in the house at the time.

(A long-standing rumor in B.C. politics is that Gibson will run federally in the next election).

TRIBUTE FOR CALDER

The legislature Thursday paid tribute to Atlin MLA Frank Calder who has served in the house for 25 years.

Calder, who switched from the NDP to the Social Credit party in 1975, said at a reception in his honor he hopes the NDP bears him no grudge.

If there was any grudge, it was he who has borne it. But now he would like to do away with it, he said.

The events leading to his being fired from the cabinet were his own fault, he said, adding that he would like to apologize to NDP leader Dave Barrett.

The events surrounding his 1973 demotion have never been made public. Barrett, who was premier at the time, said only that Calder was being stripped from his ministry without portfolio post for being "less than truthful."

Premier Bennett noted that Calder was the first native Indian to be a minister of the Crown in Canadian history.

Bennett said Calder became a strong voice for the north and was one of the members who rose above party politics.

Representatives of the three Opposition parties also paid tribute to Calder.

Right To Work Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees voted unanimously Thursday to oppose any proposal to introduce right-to-work legislation in B.C.

The 250 delegates to the annual convention represent 25,000 public employees and 100 CUPE locals in B.C.

Tom Fawkes, of the International Woodworkers of America said that right-to-work legislation would mean the end of closed union shops and would weaken unions in bargaining with employers.

Under such legislation, employees would be allowed to receive all union benefits, but would not be required to join the union or pay dues.

"So called right-to-work legislation gives no one any rights and gives no one any work," Fawkes said.

This type of legislation has existed in the United States since the turn of the century, he said, and the American experience proves that right-to-work legislation lowers workers' standard of living.

He said the 20 states which have right-to-work legislation have the lowest standards of living in the U.S.

"Right-to-work laws are a passport to poverty," said Fawkes.

He said because workers have such low wages in these states, governments receive little in income taxes, resulting in a poor education system and a low level of social services.

Fawkes said a strong campaign against right-to-work proposals are necessary because of moves by the Independent Contractors and Businessmen Association of B.C. to influence government and the public through an expensive advertising campaign.

He said that some Social Credit MLAs are in favor of right-to-work legislation, including some cabinet ministers.

N-Liability Laws Adequate in Canada, U.S.: Lawyer

OTTAWA (CP) - Canadians and Americans are insured for injury or damage resulting from a nuclear accident in either country, says a legal adviser for the Atomic Energy Control Board.

J.F.D. MacIsaac said Thursday that nuclear liability laws in both countries include reciprocal arrangements when an accident in Canadian territory causes damage to American citizens or vice versa.

The Canadian Nuclear Liability Act, passed by Parliament in 1970, became effective in October, 1976. It requires operators of nuclear reactors to carry $75 million in liability insurance, he said.

Under the act, insurance companies provide liability for up to $30 million and the federal government provides the remaining $45 million at commercial rates through an agreement with insurance companies.

Section 34 of the act says the operators of Canadian nuclear reactors are not liable for damages resulting from an accident outside the country, MacIsaac said.

However, the U.S., or any other reciprocating country can be liable for damages if there is an accident in production, processing, carriage, storage or use of nuclear material in their country that affects Canadians in Canada.

Roy Clarke, a Toronto insurance broker, told the Canadian Nuclear Association Thursday that in contrast to the Canadian act, U.S. legislation provides a maximum limit on nuclear liability.

The U.S. Price-Anderson Act provided a maximum liablity limit of $560 million. The limit in France was $130 million, in West Germany, $480 million and the United Kingdom, $96 million.

But there are also provisions in the Canadian act to establish a special commission if liability claims exceed $75 million and if "because of circumstances of the incident, it is in the public interest to do so," Clarke said.

Also, he added, the no-fault nature of the law is particularly significant to the public.

"The removal of claims from lengthy court battles and the assurance that the government will step in and appoint a special commission to handle these claims" protects the citizen.

In the U.S., Clarke said, the question of the adequacy of the maximum limit has been contested in several state ballots.

And the proximity of American nuclear facilities to Canadian territory poses an interesting question about public liability, a question which now is before the U.S. Supreme Court, he added.

In 1973 a suit was brought against a North Carolina utility and the U.S. Federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission by an environmental study group backed by Ralph Nader, a U.S. consumer advocate and anti-nuclear spokesman.

"The action charged that the legal limit liability provision of the Price-Anderson Act was unconstitutional on the grounds that it would violate the citizen's constitutional rights . . . in the event that the liabilities from a nuclear incident exceeded the statuatory limit," Clarke said.

The provision was ruled unconstitutional by a federal judge and the decision was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, he said.

Court hearings are completed and a judgment is expected shortly, he said.

" The litigation (by the Nader group) was not initiated based on a genuine concern that the public was improperly protected," Clarke said.

Refugees Admitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another 25,000 Vietnamese refugees will be admitted to the United States in the next 11 months. In making the announcement Wednesday, Attorney-General Griffin Bell also authorized admission of 12,000 East European refugees by next May 1 and 500 South Americans during a two-year period.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market slipped moderately lower in active mid-afternoon trading.

Declines outnumbered advances 203 to 174 with 244 issues unchanged.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, faced with a continued rise in interest rates, slipped a bit further in moderate trading.

Numerous large banks raised their prime lending rates today from 8½ to 8¾ per cent, putting the basic charge on blue chip loans at its highest level since early 1975.

And many analysts were forecasting additional upward pressure on interest rates in the form of credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve Board.

In recent weeks the money supply has been growing considerably more rapidly than the Board wants it to as it seeks to curb inflation by limiting monetary growth.

Ramada Inns led the active list, off ⅞ to $6¾. The company issued a statement saying it had "given no consideration presently to entering the casino business."

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Massey-Ferguson dropped ¼ to $11¼, Canadian Pacific ⅛ to $17 and Seagram Co. ⅛ to $24½.

Campbell-Red Lake Mines was up ½ to $32¼ and Dome Mines ⅛ to $78⅝.

Blacks Deny Power Play at Argus

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto industrialist Conrad M. Black, who has been moving into a strategic position to control giant Argus Corp. Ltd., says his move is "not an obscene grab for Caesarian authority."

Black, 33, and his brother Montegu Black are exercising their rights under a complicated sale procedure to acquire controlling interest in Ravelston Corp. Ltd., which in turn has voting control of Argus.

Argus, an investment company whose diverse interests span supermarkets, broadcasting, pulp and paper, mining and farm equipment, has been under the chairmanship of Maxwell Meighen, 70, since the death this spring of John A. (Bud) McDougald.

Black, chairman of a number of companies including Sterling Newspapers Ltd. and Dominion Malting Ltd., and his brother already have a 22.4-per-cent interest in Ravelston through Western Dominion Investment Co. Ltd.

The remaining Ravelston shareholders are the executors and trustees of McDougald's estate with 23.6 per cent; W. E. P. Investments Ltd., acting for the estate of the late Col. W. Eric Phillips, 23.6 per cent; A. Bruce Matthews, current Argus president, 3.9 per cent; and Canadian General Investments Ltd., 26.5 per cent.

Black's move was disclosed this week in a letter to shareholders of Canadian General Investments Ltd., an investment company headed by Meighen and holding a 26.5-per-cent interest in Ravelston.

Meighen told the shareholders the company was being forced to sell the key Ravelston holdings to the Blacks under terms of a compulsory sale procedure which had been part of the original agreement on which Ravelston was formed in 1968.

The procedure means that if three shareholders agree that a fourth should sell some or all of its holdings, the fourth must sell to the other three within six months.

The Blacks exercised their rights on May 16 and Conrad Black said they were backed by the signatures of Mrs. McDougald and Mrs. Phillips.

Completion of the compulsory sale agreement could give the Blacks 48.9 per cent of Ravelston.

Also last month, the Black brothers bought 186,000 shares—slightly less than 25 per cent—of Crown Trust Co.

"I'm aware of the tendency to sensationalize events surrounding the companies (Ravelston and Argus), but I am puzzled and amazed about the latest speculation," Black said, referring to a report that Mrs. McDougald and Mrs. Phillips were not aware of what their support of the Blacks' move would mean.

Spokesmen for Mrs. McDougald and Mrs. Phillips also said the women were aware of the consequences of their alliance with the Blacks.

Black said he and his brother plan to invite other participants into the Ravelston company and ensure that control of the company remains with the McDougald and Phillips estates.

"We have asked Nelson Davis (an Argus director and friend of the founders) to join us as a shareholder," Black said, adding that Frekrik Eaton, president of Eaton's of Canada Ltd., and Argus director H. R. N. Jackman also would be invited.

Davis, whose business interests include N. M. Davis Corp. Ltd., Crown Trust, Crush International Ltd. and Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., said in an interview from Ireland he agrees with everything "that the Black boys have done."

TURKEY STRICKEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 75-pound Tom turkey that the Pacific National Exhibition planned to feature at this year's fair died of heat prostration and growing pains.

However, there are a couple of 70-pound understudies standing by and severl hens that should reach record weights of more than 40 pounds by fair time.

These birds, known as golden whites, have been developed by Langley breeder Lloyd Churches who has added a new dimension to the industry since he moved there from Oregon five years ago.

B.C. Property Tax Low: Assessor

QUESNEL (CP) — A British Columbia Assessment Authority director said Thursday that some B.C. residents are already paying lower municipal taxes than California taxpayers will be when their taxes are rolled back by the Proposition 13 referendum.

Ross Marks, mayor of 100 Mile House, said the information comes from an assessment authority comparison of property taxes in three Californa cities and four B.C. communities

Marks told the Northern Municipal Association's annual convention that the comparison shows B.C. property tax rates are about one per cent or less of market value. California residents recently approved Proposition 13, which will slash property taxes there to one per cent of market value.

(However, property tax payments are income tax deductible in the U.S.)

Marks said the figures show the 1978 tax rate on an average home in Kelowna is .78 per cent of market value. It is exactly one per cent in Prince George and a little more than one per cent in Burnaby and Victoria.

Marks said the rate in San Diego is 2.2 per cent, in San Francisco it is 2.6 per cent while in Los Angeles it is 3.2 per cent.

Also at the convention, a brief presented by the Northern Development Council said regional districts in northern B.C want people in the region to have more say in planning and development.

TAX RIP-OFF CHARGE 'ILL-TIMED'

QUESNEL (CP) — Mayor John Panagrot blasted Premier Bill Bennett and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis Thursday for accusing British Columbia municipalities of using changes in the assessment tax formula to "rip off" property tax payers.

In an address to the annual conference of the North Central Municipal Association, Panagrot said the remarks were "ill-timed and totally uncalled for."

Panagrot called on the conference to pass a resolution demanding Bennett name the municipalities that are quilty of changing the assessment formula.

Bennett and other members of the cabinet have said that responsibility for increased property taxes should be placed on municipal leaders not the provincial government, which the premier said has tried to set an example of tax reduction.

Municipal representatives said, however, that the tax increases are beyond their control and have resulted either because of the new assessment formula or because of tax increases by school boards, the assessment authority and other such bodies.

DOMAN'S DOES SOMETHING ABOUT CONSERVING HEAT AND SAVING YOU MONEY BY INTRODUCING THE "THERMOCYCLER"

This ThermoCycler heat circulator could be one of the most useful appliances you'll ever own.
It helps eliminate the problem of having too much heat at the ceiling and not enough heat at floor level. By constantly recirculating warm air from ceiling to floor, the ThermoCycler helps equalize floor-to-ceiling temperatures. This equalization lets you enjoy more of the heat you're paying for and could help reduce your heating costs. The ThermoCycler is lightweight and economical to operate. It runs on regular household current, and draws less than six watts. That's less than many clock radios . . . even less than a 10-watt light bulb. It's easy to set up, and you can move it from room to room.

Poverty Lays PWA Crash Victim Low

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ron Sims of Calgary is winning the battle for his life after losing both legs in the Feb. 11 Cranbrook jet crash, but he is steadily losing the war for the financial survival of his young family.

Sims, 28, was the most seriously injured of six who survived the fiery crash of a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 at the Cranbrook airport in which 43 passengers and crew were killed.

He says at times he didn't expect to make it, as his injuries and the trauma of the crash were too severe. But he is picking the the pieces and undergoing the slow and painful process of learning to walk again in Calgary General Hospital on two recently-fitted artificial limbs.

But Sims most immediate problems are financial. He has a baby daughter born four weeks before the crash, a wife who stays at home to look after the pair of them and no income other than monthly baby bonus cheques.

"I'm going under," he said quietly in a telephone interview from the $430-a-month apartment the family has had to rent near the hospital, where he is undergoing daily therapy. "I can't hold out much longer."

Sims is one of more than 100 persons, most of them immediate relatives of those killed in the crash, waiting for the formation of a proposed $10 million insurance pool that would make immediate cash settlements to the estates of the dead as well as to the survivors.

Lawyer Eric Lane, representing both PWA and the British underwriter Lloyd's, said liability would then be settled among the major parties involved, including PWA, the Boeing Company, the City of Cranbrook, which operates the municipal airport, and Transport Canada.

"Rents and the cost of living are pretty steep in Calgary and it's a real struggle at the moment."

INSURANCE PACT CLOSE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Insurance companies are close to an agreement to pay damages to the estates of persons killed in the Feb. 11 crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook, a lawyer for PWA said Thursday.

Eric Lane of Toronto said in an interview that insurance underwriters have agreed to advance money for a fund totalling at least $10 million. Thirty-nine passengers and four crew members died in the crash.

Lane said all that remains in setting up the fund is for the federal government to promise it will eventually contribute to the pool if the courts find Transport Canada has some responsibility in the crash.

The pool would provide immediate cash settlements to the estates of the victims as well as the six survivors, said Lane, whose main client is the British underwriter Lloyd's.

The courts would later establish liability through litigation among the major parties involved in the accident — PWA, Transport Canada, the City of Cranbrook which operates the municipal airport, the Boeing Company, and the United States subcontractor which produced the thrust reverser braking mechanism for the Boeing 737.

The jet crashed after aborting a landing attempt to avoid a municipally-operated snowplow on the runway at the southeastern British Columbia airport.

A Cranbrook coroner's jury last month cited communications problems involving Transport Canada's Calgary-based air traffic control services and mechanical difficulties with the jet's thrust reverser braking system.

The parties intially agreed to negotiate toward a June 23 pool-formation deadline but the pool concept began to fall apart earlier this month when Transport Minister Otto Lang said federal statutes prohibit his department from contributing.

Cranbrook Mayor Ty Colgur said the city also had decided not to get involved in the pool because the city did not see where it had any liability in the accident.

Gem Theft Charges Laid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two detectives from Calgary were in Vancouver Thursday to pick up a 25-year-old woman, wanted on a Canada-wide warrant, who was arrested in a $200,000 jewelry store break-in in Calgary last weekend.

Police said the woman was arrested after two rings of gold with emerald and diamond stones were found in the search of a city house Wednesday.

13 Killed

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil (AP) — Thirteen workers were killed Thursday when fire broke out on an 8,000-ton ship under construction in Porto Alegre, the Brazilian news agency reported. It said 300 workers were on the ship at the time of the fire. Cause of the blaze was not known.

Alcan Rejects Health Data

KITIMAT (CP) — An internal analysis of employee records and environmental data by Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. has shown that the main conclusion of a union health study conducted among workers here can not be substantiated, the company said today.

The study, carried out by B. W. Carnow and Associates Ltd., of Chicago, was released last November by the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers Union.

The study said smelter workers experienced excess neck and lower-back surgery as a result of exposure to fluorides in the workplace, and that some lung function changes were found.

W. J. Rich, Alcan works manager, said that although the union will not allow the company to examine the raw data upon which the study's conclusions are based, some information was released that could be checked.

"We examined our records for employees that have had neck and lower-back surgery," he said. "We then examined work histories to see if there was a relationship to fluoride exposure. There wasn't any relationship.

"As one might expect, the only relationship that could be found was with age.

ENGINEER BARRED FOR CRIBBING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Engineer Marvin Mitchell has been suspended for one year by the Association of Professional Engineers of British Columbia after being found guilty of plagiarizing another engineer's report for a submission to the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

The suspension, which runs to March 1, 1979, was handed down following an inquiry under the Engineering Professional Act.

Mitchell was charged with causing the publication of a report dated March 28, 1977 for a mining company on mineral claims that was almost a verbatim copy of a report submitted by another engineer for another company four years before.

He neither gave credit nor acknowledged the source of his work, contrary to the Association's code of ethics.

He was accused of presenting the report as being solely the product of his own research and investigation, also contrary to the code.

$444,000 AWARDED FOR CRASH INJURIES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ernest James Lucas, 32, a man confined to a wheelchair for the rest of his life, was awarded $444,783 Wednesday for injuries received in a 1976 traffic accident in nearby New Westminster.

Justice H. A. Callaghan of the British Columbia Supreme Court awarded the damages against Anthony Wayne Antoniak, driver of a van which collided with a B.C. Hydro bus after going through a red light. He said Antoniak was solely to blame for the accident.

Lucas, who was a passenger in the van, suffered severe head injuries and will have to have extended care for the rest of his life. He now is at Pearson Hospital.

Despite the amount of the award, Antoniak had $100,000 liability insurance, which, minus legal fees, might be all Lucas will receive.

Lucas can't use his legs and has partial control of his hands. As a result of the accident, brain damage has reduced his intelligence quotient to 98 from 131, has slowed his speech, and blunted the possibility that he can pursue a university education.

Witness Invites Lawyer To 'Step Outside'

TTAWA (CP) — Tempers flared Thursday when a witness at the federal royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing invited the lawyer for the RCMP to "step out in the corridor" to resolve a dispute over a line of questioning.

Lawyer Pierre Lamontagne was accused by Michel Lemay of attempting to slander him by asking questions about his criminal record and details of his personal life.

"You like that Mister from Westmount," Lemay said. "You get hundreds of dollars a day to do that.

"You're slandering everyone. It's s—t."

"Leave me alone with my past."

When Lamontagne commented that it sounded as though Lemay was making a threat, Lemay suggested Lamontagne "step out in the corridor and it won't be a threat any more."

Chairman David McDonald and commissioners Guy Gilbert and Donald Rickerd decided Lamontagne's questions were not relevant.

Wednesday, McDonald and Rickerd outvoted Gilbert to allow Lamontagne to introduce the terrorist-related convictions in the early 1960s of Jean Castonguay.

Castonguay was appearing to tell about being held in a motel overnight by two RCMP officers in 1971 who were convinced he was still involved in terrorist activities and wanted him to be an informer.

RCMP Tried to Recruit Lawyer as Spy in 1972

OTTAWA (CP) — A Montreal lawyer said Thursday that RCMP members tried to recruit him to spy on radical lawyer Robert Lemieux and others while he was working as a student in Lemieux's legal clinic in Montreal in 1972.

Andre Chamard, now 33, told the McDonald royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing that he refused the offer of money and was then told he would be digging his own grave if he revealed publicly that the approach had been made.

But Chamard, acting on Lemieux's advice, called a news conference to describe how he had been picked off a downtown street by three policemen while on his way to work and left on a road in a woods about 20 miles from the city.

"After the press conference, I lived under fear," Chamard testified. "I was afraid these men would come back."

He said he worked with Lemieux, who first gained prominence in the 1960s by defending members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ), two other lawyers and two lawyer-apprentices in the legal clinic.

He said his car was forced to a stop by three police cars in June, 1972, and he was told by Cpl. (now Inspector) Bernard Blier, to get into the back seat of the unmarked police car.

"I thought it was an arrest," he said. The police, whom he didn't realize at the time were members of the RCMP, mentioned they wanted to check him out for drugs.

But instead of going to a police station, they headed south of Montreal onto the Trans-Canada Highway towards Quebec City.

Chamard said they asked him about the lawyers in the clinic in a general way and suggested he become an informer. They said they would pay him by depositing money in a bank account in his name.

They turned off the highway onto a sideroad and continued onto a private road which stopped in a small woods.

At one point, Chamard said he tried to get out of the car but he was grabbed and held in a head and arm lock with his head towards the floor. He estimated he was held like that for between five and 15 minutes before being allowed to sit up again.

The other incident in which Blier was involved was an attempt to recruit Michel Lemay, now 39, to inform on a citizen's group in Trois-Rivieres, Que., in the spring of 1972.

In animated testimony before the commission, Lemay said Blier tried to blackmail him into informing on a citizens' group with which he was involved by saying there were warrants for his arrest in British Columbia.

ROYAL BANK LOSES CUSO OVER LOANS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) announced Thursday that it is withdrawing all its short-term investments in the Royal Bank of Canada because the bank makes loans to South Africa.

CUSO, an independent development agency that sends skilled workers abroad to help poorer nations, said it wants the bank to stop making loans to South Africa.

In a letter to Earle McLaughlin, Royal Bank president, CUSO said it found the South African policy of apartheid "an unnecessary evil which must be rejected by people who believe in human justice."

Rene's Tax Threat: They Better Not

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque hinted Thursday there might be hell to pay if Ottawa persists in trying to end the sales tax war with Bill C-56 in its present form.

"We're telling them they better not," Levesque said at a news conference where he made public a letter sent by Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau to his federal counterpart, Jean Chretien.

The letter denounces as "absolutely unacceptable" Ottawa's plans, as embodied in Bill C-56, to distribute $186 million directly to Quebec taxpayers rather than turning it over to the Quebec government.

The money is part of the $226 million in compensation Ottawa was prepared to pay the Quebec government if the latter had played along with Chretien's April 10 budget proposal that provinces reduce their retail sales taxes to stimulate the economy.

Quebec refused the Chretien formula and chose to enact its own set of tax cuts.

Chretien responded by offering Quebec only $40 million in compensation. But later he tabled Bill C-56, whereby the remaining $186 million would be distributed in cheques to taxpayers rather than simply turned over to the government.

In his latest letter, Parizeau says the only solution acceptable to Quebec now is a federal income tax rebate applicable to the 1978 tax year.

In an earlier letter to Chretien and in statements he made last week, Parizeau seemed willing to accept, if necessary, the idea that Ottawa send the money directly to Quebec taxpayers.

In Ottawa, Chretien termed Parizeau's latest letter "a hell of a flip-flop."

"It doesn't look like it was written by the same man who sent me that letter last week with all sorts of comment about how both proposals were all right. Now one is not.

"The only thing the same in the two letters is the signature," Chretien said.

No Hollywood Sex Hostess Says Sex-In-Chains Girl

LONDON (AP) — Joyce McKinney, a former U.S. beauty queen who jumped bail in Britain just before her scheduled trial on charges of kidnapping her Mormon lover, denied British newspaper reports she was a sex hostess in Hollywood.

The 27-year-old blonde fugitive said Thursday in a television interview with the BBC that she is "just an old-fashioned girl" and newspaper stories saying she ran a sex-for-sale agency in the United States are "crazy."

She acknowledged, however, that when she was a "starving young actress" in Hollywood several years ago she fell prey to "a sleazy agent" who got her into "some strange modelling situations."

Miss McKinney was interviewed by BBC reporter Michael Delahaye at an undisclosed location in the United States.

Miss McKinney and her co-defendant Keith May, 24, jumped bail and fled disguised as deaf-mutes shortly before their trial was to begin May 2.

Asked about her attitude toward love, Miss McKinney said: "I think it's very special and very sacred. It's something that should only be done with one person.

"I'm old-fashioned and probably differ from my college classmates."

LISA NAMED QUEEN OF JORDAN

AMMAN (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan married Lisa Halaby in a brief, traditional Moslem ceremony Thursday. He surprised his people by proclaiming the blonde, blue-eyed American his queen.

Holding hands before a black-robed Islamic grand mufti in the royal palace, the 26-year-old Miss Halaby, wearing a floor-length white wedding gown, and the 42-year-old king, in a blue suit, exchanged vows in Arabic:

"I have betrothed myself to thee in marriage for the dowry agreed upon," she said to the prompting of the Moslem religious leader.

"I have accepted you as my wife in marriage for the dowry agreed upon," Hussein replied.

During the four-minute ceremony, the bride was converted to Islam from Christianity.

The amount of the dowry, paid by the husband to his bride, was not reported. But palace sources said it would a considerable sum.

At the end of the four-minute ceremony in the Oriential Room of Zahran palace, the royal couple did not kiss, as in Christian weddings.

Soviet Tank Cut Could Delay Bomb

OTTAWA (CP) — The biggest trade-off for the neutron bomb would be a Soviet decision to reduce its tank forces, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Thursday.

"If you saw a major reduction in Soviet armor, that would be the most significant deterrent in terms of making a decision to delay neutron bomb production indefinitely," the minister told the Commons defence committee.

He was replying to Progressive Conservative MP Lloyd Crouse (Southwestern Nova) who asked what Danson considered an adequate Soviet response to President Carter's decision to delay production of the neutron weapon.

Carter has said he is postponing production of the weapon to see what the Soviets are willing to give up in return.

Danson said a move by the Soviets to reduce tank forces would be appropriate as the neutron weapon is an anti-tank device. The bomb is designed to kill people with minimum damage to property.

STEEL FIGHT RESUMES

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative has renewed his fight to get the federal government to allow British Columbians to import steel beams without paying a major penalty.

Ron Huntington (Capilano) said in the Commons that the Ontario steel supplier is unable to supply wide flange steel beams used in construction without serious delays.

He spoke as a three-month suspension on anti-dumping duty on such beams imported into B.C., Alberta, Newfoundland and the Yukon approached its expiration date.

He attempted to move a motion calling on the government to put nominal dumping duties on the steel beams immediately so that industry in B.C., now suffering hardship, can start importing.

He was unable to get the necessary unanimous support to put the motion.

Huntington waged a strong fight earlier this year against the 30-per-cent anti-dumping duty imposed on imported beams last September.

Terror of the Spiders

QUEBEC (CP) — The Black Spider motorcycle gang terrorized the nearby village of St. Michel to the point where its residents did not report "an enormous number of rapes" for fear of reprisals, a restaurant owner said Thursday.

Gilles Carrier, testifying before the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime, said he finally armed himself after some of the gang's dozen members allegedly attempted to rape his wife while he was away on vacation.

For the last few years, he added, the Spiders have created an atmosphere of "terror." The citizenry had been afraid to inform on the gang because many members were born and raised in the village of 1,000, about 40 kilometres east of here.

The commission, however, had some trouble isolating responsibility for the alleged sexual assaults during questioning of Jean-Marie Leclerc, the Black Spider's self-proclaimed founder.

Leclerc, clean-shaven and well-groomed, denied that he assaulted several teen-aged girls in a dozen separate incidents dating back to 1971. He was grilled closely about each one by commission lawyers.

But Leclerc, 27, insisted he had not forced himself upon any of the girls, all from the St. Michel area.

"I don't think I'm the Boston Strangler," he said when asked whether he had placed his hand on the neck of one girl to force her to have sexual relations.

In another case, he confirmed he had sexual relations with a girl but denied this was against her will.

"I didn't need to use any threats."

In one or two cases, the incidents allegedly involved forcing a girl to perform oral sex with one or two club members.

Airlines to Carry Troops in Crisis

OTTAWA (CP) — Commercial airlines have agreed to carry troops in a wartime emergency and details are being worked out with the air carriers, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Thursday.

Department officials added that they are talking with the airlines about how far the carriers are willing to go "in a shooting circumstance."

Their comments came as the Commons defence committee discussed efforts to deter an enemy attack in Europe.

Admiral, Robert Falls, chief of defence staff, said after the committee meeting the armed forces have already chartered aircraft under the agreement for carrying freight. But the accord had never been tested in a military situation.

NATO allies are also thinking of asking manufacturers of civilian aircraft to strengthen loading doors and floors to bear heavy military equipment in cases of emergency, he said.

Falls told the committee the Warsaw pact forces in Europe also have plans to reinforce their front-line troops with reserves carried by civilian aircraft.

Working out similar agreements with Canadian carriers helped to balance this Soviet capability and maintain the balance of power in Europe, he said.

"We would need all the airlift we have in the event of an imminent conflict in Europe to reinforce our elements and make sure they are viable units," Falls said.

John Killick, department supply chief, said the agreement with the airlines was reached two years ago "and has been working very satisfactorily."

Cartoonist Bucks Trend with 86-Cent Dollar

TORONTO (CP) — Free-lance cartoonist Holly Fuller of Fingal, Ont., has invented the "Trudeau Fuddle Buck" and says he hopes to capitalize on the bills which he sells for 86 cents each.

He said the fuddle buck features a bust of Prime Minister Trudeau on the front with the notation "Lucky Pierre" and warns the holder it is subject to depreciation.

It also bears half a maple leaf and half a fleur-de-lis and the further warning: "Not Negotiable and Good for Nothing."

Fuller said the fuddle buck, for which he has obtained a patent, epitomizes the country's present sorry state.

He said a first issue of 10,000 fuddle bucks already has been sold and he is planning to have 10,000 more printed for his company Paradise Creations.

Color Coding For Nutrition?

A private member's bill which would require that food price-stickers be color-coded to indicate nutritional value was introduced in the legislature Thursday by George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney).

He said retail outlets would be required to attach stickers in one of three colors — green for foods of good nutritional value, amber for foods high in calories, sugar, fat and salt content, and red for foods that are of low nutritional value.

High Hopes

Labor Minister Allan Williams said Thursday he is optimistic his recent 10-day tour of Japan will result in increased lumber exports from B.C. Williams said the trip was successful, and he expects that more B.C. lumber will be used in the Japanese housing industry, especially two-by-fours.

Forest Act Termed Sellout by Gibson

The new provincial Forest Act is a sellout to the large forest companies because it lets them sit on large reserves of coastal timber, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Thursday.

Gibson told the legislature it is apparent the Social Credit government is in the big companies' pockets.

"The big fellas think they've got the government pretty well where they want them," the Liberal leader said. "A sellout is being perpetuated."

He said that a recent five-year study of the coastal forest industry showed the eight large multi-national companies control about 80 per cent of the timber.

However, Gibson said they don't use 29 per cent of their allowable annual cut which is an unacceptable situation.

He said that because large companies are allowed to keep vast forest resources in reserve, the industry has suffered when it can't afford to.

B.C. cannot afford to lay back, content in the mistaken belief "we are the Arabs of the wood world," he added.

He said provisions in the bill which call for greater accountability in the issuance of tree farm licences are nearly useless because there will be few new licences granted in the next few years.

Don Lockstead (NDP—Mackenzie) told the house the government should set up a provincial log marketing board to ensure that independent loggers have adequate supply.

Lockstead, stressing he was speaking personally and not for his party, said that while there are relatively high prices available at present for forest products because of good demand and the low value of the Canadian dollar, prices generally are too low.

He said a marketing board modelled on the B.C. Petroleum Corporation would keep prices up and thereby allow the Crown to collect more royalties.

Such a board would give the small, private operators a greater chance to compete with the eight major multi-national corporations, said Lockstead, adding such a board would encourage development of new forest companies.

OPPONENTS BLASTED

Weeds cost B.C.'s farming industry $64 million a year, the legislature's select standing committee on agriculture reported Thursday.

The committee said in another of its series of special reports on the province's food industry that annual losses in the agricultural sector due to weeds amount to $36 million, and a probable further $28 million a year is lost in the beef industry.

The report suggests a public relations campaign be initiated to convince the public of the need for increased use of herbicides to kill weeds.

"It is the opinion of the research staff that presentations by environmentalists have been effective in reducing the use of herbicides in B.C. As a result, local and provincial governments and Crown corporations hesitate to use herbicides when required."

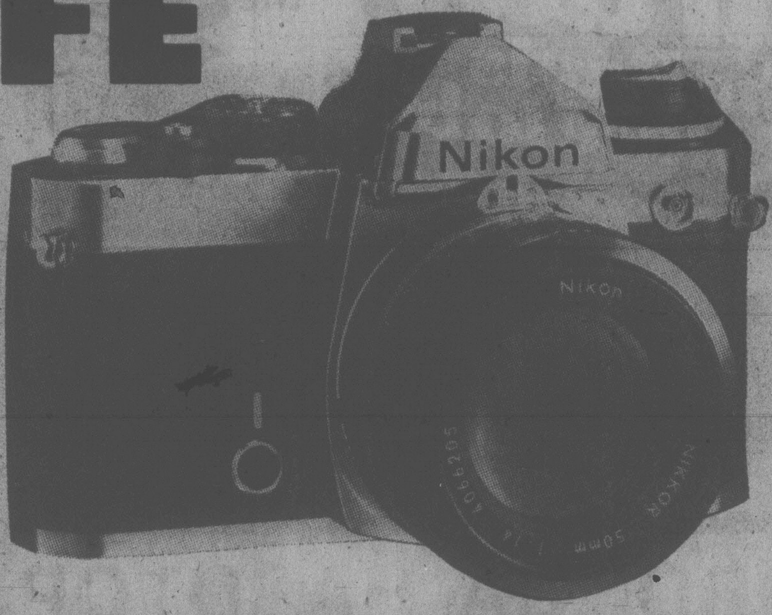
The New Ones From Nikon

NIKON FE



Bright, full-information viewfinder

With the FE, you're never in the dark. The bright, silvered penta-prism, combined with the special treatment applied on the screen by Nikon's engineers, makes the most of TTL viewing at full aperture. Information includes the shutter speed in use, as well as the aperture set in the case of AI-type Nikkor lenses. Even a ready-light is built-in, for use with the SB-10 Speedlight Unit. All this keeps you in continuous, total control.

Interchangeable focusing screens for greater viewing flexibility

A true system camera in the Nikon tradition, the FE has interchangeable focusing screens, each one designed for brighter viewing and easier focusing. All three types — K, B and E — are exclusive to the FE, with Type K being the camera's standard screen.

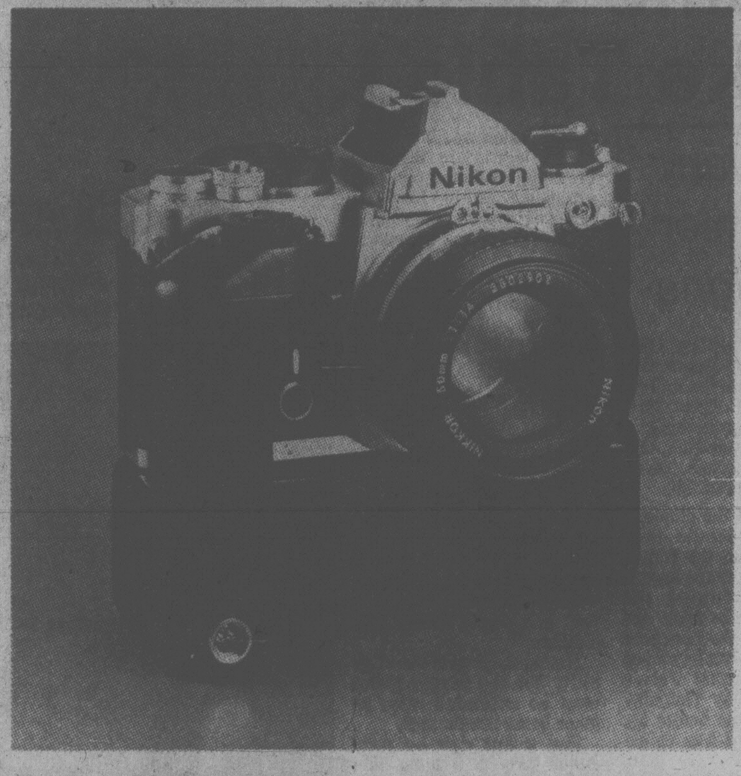
NOTE: When used with the Nikon FE, the new AI Nikkor lenses offer the Automatic Maximum Aperture Indexing (AI) and Aperture-Direct-Readout (ADR) facility. Nikkor lenses without this facility can still be used with the FE, a combination that requires stop-down metering. Nearly all Nikkor lenses, except for some very old models, can be modified to offer the AI and ADR facility. Please check with your camera dealer for detailed information regarding AI lens modification.

* The design of these lenses does not permit full-aperture metering; AI not applicable.



Motor Drive photography with the FM

Nikon's introduction of the first SLR motor drive in 1959 not only offered the photographer a new picture-taking convenience in the form of motorized film advance — it also opened up a whole new world of photography. No more missed shots because the camera wasn't wound or you couldn't wind it fast enough. The motor drive does this for you, so you can concentrate all your attention on your subject and catch its fleeting expressions, as well as go into sequential shooting.

A true system camera, the Nikon FM has its own motor drive system, which is centred on the MSII Motor Drive Unit.

Made of durable, sturdy metal and handsomely finished in black to match the camera body's black or chrome finish, the MD-II is so compact and lightweight that the camera body/motor drive assembly weighs just as much as the average 35mm SLR.

ANOTHER NEW ONE!

AUTOMATIC FLASH OPERATION

Mount the Nikon SB-10 Speedlight Unit on the FE's hot-shoe contact, with the camera on automatic—and the correct shutter speed for flash synchronization will be set for you at 1/90 sec., automatically.
With the FE's electronic brain taking care of the shutter speed, all you have to do is set the ASA speed of the film in use and choose one of the two aperture settings, marked orange and blue, provided on top of the SB-10. The unit's built-in computerized flash control will then adjust the light output, relative to the subject-to-camera distance . . . again, automatically.

Riot Police Seal Soweto

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Heavily armed riot police virtually sealed off the huge black ghetto of Soweto today on the second anniversary of the beginning of riots that killed 618 people.

Police said the township, 15 miles south of Johannesburg, was "quiet" and labeled as "nonsense" newspaper reports that 600 blacks were arrested over the last several days of intensive patrols.

"In the 24-hour period ending at eight ... this morning, I've had 24 cases reported," Brigadier Jan Visser, chief of Soweto police said. "I've brought the crime rate down to almost nil."

Visser said the heavy shows of force in Soweto and other black and Asian areas west of Johannesburg were "ongoing routine anticrime" measures that had nothing to do with second anniversary of the riots.

On June 16, 1976, two black school pupils were shot dead by police at a protest march against the enforced use of Afrikaans as a language of instruction in black schools.

The incident precipitated six months of racial riots nationwide that claimed 618 black lives before subsiding.

Black South Africans called for a ban on entertainment over the weekend and planned prayer vigils and commemorative services to honor the people who died.

Police dragnets have raked the black townships around Johannesburg for the last three months and have resulted in hundreds of blacks being arrested for infractions of pass laws, possession of illegal drugs and dangerous weapons.

Two weeks ago police said more than 500 blacks were arrested in one of the police crackdowns.

FIREMEN TALKING

Representatives of the Victoria firemen's union met today with Labor Minister Allan Williams to discuss the breakdown in contract talks with the city.

The firefighters asked mediator Clark Gilmour to withdraw from the dispute last week and met Sunday to decide what action to take next. That decision was not announced pending today's meeting with the minister.

The firemen served strike notice April 28.

The union wants a 5.7 per cent cost package increase. The city's last offer was 5.1 per cent.

$5 Settlement Ends False Arrest Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $5 settlement Thursday ended a British Columbia Supreme Court suit in which a lawyer sued a National Harbors Board policeman for false arrest.

Frank Harrop sued Constable Larry Morigeau, alleging he was falsely arrested April 24, 1976, on harbor board property.

Justice J. G. Ruttan was told by lawyer Richard Covell, acting for Harrop, that the suit had been settled on the basis that the plaintiff will accept a sum of money paid into court by the defendant and that the action would be dismissed by consent.

Lawyer David Nuttall, who acted for Morigeau, said later he had paid $5 into court as an offer of settlement.

According to documents filed in court, Morigeau had stopped a group of youngsters who were smoking marijuana on harbor board property when Harrop intervened.

When Harrop refused to provide identification at the request of Morigeau, the constable arrested him and took him to the NHB office.

Home Grant Hike Tabled

Legislation was introduced in the legislature today increasing the home purchase grant to $2,500 for first-time home buyers who are couples with at least one dependent child.

New home purchasers who don't qualify for the family grant are still eligible for the existing $1,000 grant.

Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said the amendments to existing legislation honor a promise made in the throne speech March 30.

When asked if he felt the new legislation would discriminate against childless couples, Curtis said: "If we are going to assist one group, we feel that it is best to do it first to a young family with children."

The minister said the eligibility for the larger grant may be extended later to other home purchasers.

The grant can be paid either through a lump sum payment or by a monthly payment of $52.50 for the first five years of ownership.

The grant is available on all homes purchased by eligible recipients on or after April 11.

Curtis also introduced an amendment making homeowner grants available to residents of housing units occupied under 99-year lease agreements.

The amendment is retroactive to January 1977.

Italian Premier Resigns

ROME (AP) — Italy's governing Christian Democrats, still reeling from the murder of party chief Aldo Moro, have been hit by the resignation of Italy's president, Giovanni Leone, because of accusations of corruption.

Leone, one of the clique of Christian Democratic leaders that has run the Italian government since the Second World War, denied the charges of tax evasion and involvement in the Lockheed payoff scandal. But he moved out of the Quirinal Palace with no ceremony Thursday night, 6½ months before his seven-year term was to expire.

Senate President Amintore Fanfani, another Christian Democrat and former premier, succeeded to the presidency temporarily.

A joint session of the two-house parliament plus 58 representatives of regional legislatures must start voting for Leone's successor within 15 days. A tough battle is likely, adding to the troubles of a country frightened by terrorism and strapped by economic woes.

CARTER CLIPPED FOR $306,000

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter suffered a $306,000 loss in 1977 on investments placed in a blind trust he created when he took office 17 months ago, his financial records disclosed Thursday.

The trust consists of business investments, chiefly in the Carter family's peanut business, which are administered by Charles Kirbo, a long-time friend.

The investments were placed in the trust to avoid any conflict of interest between his personal financial affairs and his actions as president.

In releasing the president's financial records and his tax return for 1977, the White House said details of the loss were not available because the terms of the trust barred the president from seeking information.

Carter's gross income in 1977, his first year in the White House, totalled $358,155. This included his presidential salary of $200,000 and dividends of $114,182.

His taxable income, after deductions for capital gains losses, charitable donations, deductions for taxes paid in 1976, and other deductions, was $189,160.

His federal tax bill for 1977 was $48,152. He made advance tax payments of $83,313 and is due a refund of $35,161 from the Internal Revenue Service.

The president's net worth, including cash in banks, property and other items, was reported at $795,357 in 1977, a decline of $27,101 in a year.

TOWN TALK

Terry Wickett, 17, a grade 12 student at Victoria Senior Secondary School, made such a good job of a recent project that somebody with light fingers lifted it when it was included in an industrial education display at the Hillside shopping mall last week.

Industrial arts teacher Bruce Somers says the missing project is a coffee table made in dark pine in the shape of a ship's steering wheel with brass inlay.

How about steering it back to its home port?

A red tide will be flowing in the commons block at UVic tonight as more than 500 mounties past and present pay tribute to B.C.'s top mountie, Deputy Commissioner Peter Bazowski, who will be retiring from the force in August.

Among those attending the formal dinner dance will be five former commanding officers in B.C. — former assistant commissioners Ed Willis, whom Bazowski replaced, Gordon Cunningham, Jerry Engel, Frank Spalding, and former commissioner Charles Rivett-Carnac, all of whom are living in retirement in the Capital Region District.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom and former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes will also be there as well as senior officers from detachments throughout the province, local police department chiefs, and representatives of the FBI and United States DEA (Drug Enforcement Agency), with which Bazowksi has had close ties since the days he was RCMP liaison officer in Washington D.C.

A dance orchestra from the RCMP band, which is coincidentally making an appearance in Vancouver this week, will provide the music.

Leaves one to wonder where the BATvan will be posted tonight. A mountie spokesman politely declined to comment.

Oops, just a minor oversight . . .

It seems that a number of ornamental trees planted in Sooke last year as part of an $1,800 beautification project have died of thirst, because no one was responsible for watering them.

When the Sooke Forum Council was told that at least 20 per cent of the trees are dead, a councillor inquired who was responsible for watering them.

The reported reply of Sooke regional director Charles Perkins: "It's nobody's job. That's the problem."

But Perkins said he had installed a water tank on the back of his pickup truck in an effort to water some of the trees, and some businessmen were tending those trees near their premises.

There's one consolation, though. If Sooke ever faces a Proposition 13 taxpayers' revolt, the service surely can't get much worse.

Col. A.E. Sherwin and two other ex-soldiers, G.C. D'Arcy and F.D.H. Nelson, have lost their battle to have the Second World War gun emplacement at the Ogden Point pier preserved as an historic site.

Sherwin says the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada is to meet this month and the wrecking of the emplacement should have been delayed until the board had reached a decision.

Watery frolics (inanimate) may encourage more splashy use (animate) of Saanich's Gordon Head pool, according to a report submitted to Saanich aldermen this week.

The report, prepared by the supervisors of the Gordon Head, Pearkes and Cedar Hill recreation facilities, suggests in somewhat quaint language that the white wall at the deep end of the pool bear a mural depicting an "aquatic scene relating to fun."

Imagination runs riot: A scene from a Roman Baths orgy? A blow-up still from an Annette Funicello beach-blanket movie? Merrily disporting seals or dolphins?

Why, the possibilities are endless.

Victorians planning to visit California this summer or fall should avoid the dates July 10 and Sept. 26 — if they accept the word of a local soothsayer.

Psychic Julian North says major earthquakes will rock California on those dates, and the resulting damage will have repercussions on the entire economy of the Pacific Coast.

B.C.'s supply of imported produce will suffer, and in a wartime spirit of coping we'll all turn to growing our own, according to North's theory.

"Anyone with even a backyard will turn over the sod to feed the hungry market," he says.

North's doing his bit by building a greenhouse in his backyard.

So don't complain that you weren't warned.

Those who arrived a little late for county court's Call Day last Tuesday had a good excuse. The third-floor courtroom had the sign on the inside of the door. Yes, the door has actually been hung the wrong way following recent renovations.

And speaking of signs, the daily pandemonium of prosecutors and defence counsel, court reporters, accused persons and the general public trying to find out which cases are going on in which courtrooms could be resolved by posting outside county, Supreme and Appeal courtrooms a daily list showing the name of the judge and a list of cases to be heard.

At present, the cases (but not the specific courtroom on the second or third floors of the Law Courts) are listed, without even the presiding judge's name, only on a bulletin board on the main floor.

What have we ever done to the provincial government, to merit such an insult? Do we really deserve to be saddled with a name implying we're old fashioned and behind the times?

We refer to our latest mailed copy of the British Columbia Government News. The label bearing the address identifies us as "The Victorian Times."

To quote Queen Victoria, we are not amused.

Clammy Chills, Strange Flashes In the Darkness

Reporter Al Forrest turns to ghost writing and, accompanied by photographer John McKay, haunts Oak Bay's golf course in a spirited bid to spook out an eerie tale of the supernatural

Forrest keeps watch with infra-red binoculars

Just before midnight I felt the presence of the Oak Bay ghost.

There were also flashes of Something Strange.

And there was whistling that would scare anyone out of their wits.

The story begins when I was told that British Columbia's most famous ghost likes to make her appearance in May and June.

In fact, her most recent appearance on record was in 1968, exactly 10 years ago.

I needed a witness; one doesn't go ghost-hunting alone.

I asked Times photographer John McKay if he would accompany me through the Oak Bay golf course to sit and wait for the ghost to appear.

Without hesitating he said: "That sounds like a pretty dumb idea!"

But moments later he changed his mind. "Well, why not? Maybe it will be worth a laugh."

So we set out about 11 p.m. for the Lair of the Ghost. McKay was equipped with camera and flash gun while I had infra-red binoculars, the kind the Mounties and the CIA use to see in the dark.

The ghost has reportedly been seen many times in the 1950s and 60s. One guess is she is the spirit of a woman who was murdered on the golf course in 1936. But it might be some other troubled spirit. Still, the ghost is always seen only at the one place on the waterfront.

We reached the spot and it was forlorn and scarey.

Not a sound except the swish of the waves against the shore. To the southwest, both the land and water were in total darkness — nothing visible except the lights of Port Angeles across the strait.

To the northeast, where the ghost is supposedly seen, there was a bit of light, including one that sent reflections across the water.

When the ghost was sighted on previous occasions, the witnesses first experienced a cold, clammy chill that seemed to come up suddenly, changing their mood, and then they claimed they saw the ghost as a swiftly-drifting vaporous creature, moving along the beach.

Twice I felt the cold, clammy chill.

The first time I looked around excitedly — but nothing. Just the light playing off the water.

It was about five minutes later that I saw Something.

It was a white shape, swirling in the tall grass about 15 metres from the beach.

I grabbed my binoculars but couldn't find it. When I put down the glasses and looked, it had defintely vanished.

"I saw something," I told McKay. "But I dont know what it was."

He suggested we should be satisfied with that and go home. He took a couple of photos, using the flash.

"Hope the neighbors don't see the flash and call the police," he said.

"Yes. I can just see the headline now: Police Arrest the Oak Bay Flasher."

But we waited half an hour longer, giving the ghost every effort to show up. Suddenly it got very cold; there was a chill that cut right through me.

"Let's go," I said.

We began picking our way carefully through the dark when again I saw Something.

It was very quick, like a falling star, but moving just above the grass. By the time I wheeled around and got my glasses on the spot it had vanished.

It wasn't much. But I was struck by the coincidence. On both occasions I had felt cold and clammy and exactly five minutes later there was a glimpse of something — and both times in the tall grass near the beach.

We have no pictures of anything. Just a chill that won't go away.

Oh yes, the whistling. I heard it and I spun around quickly.

"What's that?!"

"It's me," McKay said.

"Oh! Thank goodness! But do you mind not whistling? My hair is already standing on end!"

Fire Guts Fairfield Store

Fire erupted in a shop in the Fairfield plaza this morning sending the owner, his wife and three customers running for their lives.

Wallace Read, owner of the Fairfield Variety Store, 1540 Fairfield, said he smelled smoke and suddenly saw fire coming from the back of the shop.

"It happened so fast we dropped everything and had to make a run for it," he said.

Three customers also darted out the door ahead of the flames.

The store was gutted and Read estimated damage to stock alone at $30,000. A fire official put the total loss at closer to $50 000.

Cause of the fire, reported at 10:32 a.m., isn't known but Read suspected an electrical failure.

While firemen were fighting the blaze, employees of Paddington's flower and bird shop next door at 1544 Fairfield sat on a curb of the parking lot surrounded by caged birds they had removed from the smoke.

Police Arbitrator Proprosed

Recently retired B.C. Supreme Court Justice Angelo Branca has been proposed by the Saanich police board as arbitrator in a dispute with the policemen's union over a new two-year contract.

But the union hasn't yet indicated if it approves the choice.

Five names submitted by the union have been rejected by the board.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, chairman of the police board, said that today is the deadline for picking an arbitrator. If the sides can't agree one will be appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The dispute centres on the wording of a cost-of-living clause in a new contract agreed to by both sides May 12.

DOWNCAST GRACE KEEPS SMILING

Tall Ships Ring Up No Sail

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy today expressed disappointment the Tall Ships did not have their sails up when they arrived this morning but she still managed a smile as she waved official greetings from a giant helicopter.

"I don't know why we were misinformed about the sails," she told a pre-arrival meeting at The Empress.

She publicly asked Capt. Cook Bicentennial Committee chairman Ed Sweeney to give or obtain an explanation.

There will be one full-sail demonstration of the two tall ships at Ogden Point dock at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Later, in an interview, she said the Victoria waterfront would be an exciting place all summer, although she was disappointed that the number of tall ships would be less than expected.

"We are just the hosts for the show. The race was organized by the American Sail Training Association and they are doing the best they can for us.

Lots of rigging but no sails as ships berth at Ogden Pt.

"There will be a race of the smaller ships.

"In addition, in July we will have the largest naval review here ever, the review of the grey ships."

The U.S. tall ship, the Eagle, will arrive in late July and this could prove to be the highlight of the festivities, she said.

Another tall ship, the Osprey of Japan, will soon be on its way to B.C. and hopefully will arrive in Victoria before it has to join the race from Seattle to San Francisco.

She announced that another tall ship, the Sagres, from Portugal, will arrive this autumn. It is scheduled to be in Vancouver from Oct. 17 to 22 but it has been invited to spend two of those days in Victoria.

Mrs. McCarthy said the American Sail Training Association will get its full $90,000 from the B.C. government for providing the vessels. She said an earlier-announced figure of $200,000 was erroneous.

Mrs. McCarthy, aldermen and reporters were taken by helicopter over the two Japanese tall ships as they lay at anchor at Esquimalt early this morning.

Okanagan Helicopters representative Kyle Steele said it was probably the largest chopper ever to fly over Victoria.

The 19,000-pound vehicle, the Sikorsky S-61, carries a maximum load of 32 passengers but regularly carries 26 passengers plus a crew of three.

Okanagan Helicopters hopes to obtain permission to use it for a regular Victoria-Vancouver service.

It is powered by two 1,500-horsepower motors and its rotors have a diameter of 62 feet.

In a demonstration run this morning, the chopper left the Johnson Street heli-pad in a cloud of dust and went to 1,000 feet before moving down to greet the tall ships.

The two Japanese vessels were lying at anchor, about 80 metres apart, outside Esquimalt harbor.

The chopper went down to 200 feet and began a figure eight pattern around and between the two ships.

The ships then hoisted anchor to sail, under power, to Ogden Point. After welcoming ceremonies, the two captains paid courtesy calls on Rear Admiral M.A. Martin, Commander Maritime Forces Pacific, Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, Mrs. McCarthy and Mayor Young.

Delivering Message Taxes City

City council wants Victoria ratepayers to know that local government isn't really to blame for increasing property taxes — but it can't decide how to get the message across.

A proposal to mail an explanatory letter to every householder in the city fell flat at a meeting of the finance committee Thursday when one of the aldermen asked how much such a mailing would cost.

"About $5,000," said city comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

"Forget it," said Mayor Mike Young.

Instead of the mailing, the committee decided simply to have a detailed report explaining the current tax increase on hand at city hall for anyone who wants to read it. If the demand is great enough the possibility of a mailing will come up again.

The four-page report lists the city's revenues and expenditures, briefly describes the 1978 capital program and explains that the provincial government is largely responsible for the tax hike. (The provincial government has already blamed the municipalities for it.)

The report says that 86 per cent of the properties in Victoria will experience a 5 to 15 per cent increase in assessment, while 9 per cent of the properties will have a 15 to 40 per cent increase and about 2 per cent will rise up to 5 per cent. Just over 1 per cent of the properties will experience a reduction in assessment.

The report says that as a result of provincial reassessments apartments are having their assessment reduced by an average of 15 per cent, while single-family residential taxable assessments are increasing by an average of 15 per cent.

"Your council has made a strong representation to the provincial government to right what is in our opinion an inequity in this legislation," states the report.

It also acknowledges that the city's capital program is partially responsible for higher taxes and goes on to list the major projects ordered by city hall in 1978.

Listed are public works projects, sewer and drain programs, improvements to the Crystal Pool and expenditures at various parks in the city.

SIX-TIME FINALIST and looking for fifth title, Gorge Vale's Dorothy DeGirolamo playfully reminds Pat Derry of experience Royal Colwood member must face in today's showdown for City women's golf championship. It's Derry's first appearance in final. (Times photo by Bill Halkett).

DEGIROLAMO ADVANCES TO FINAL AGAIN

Derry New Challenger

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Pat Derry of Royal Colwood became the new contender for the Victoria and district women's golf championship and Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale remained the familiar one.

Derry, whose enthusiasm for the game caught fire only five years ago, moved into today's 18-hole final at Gorge Vale by defeating 20-year-old Heather Stewart of Uplands on an extra hole in Thursday's semi-finals.

DeGirolamo, in the final for a sixth time and bidding for her fifth championship, scored a contrasting success. Winning the first five holes, Dorothy cruised to a 7 and 6 triumph over 16-year-old Jill Johnson of Salt Spring Island.

For Derry, reaching the city final for the first time, there was mixed emotions. The extra-hole victory was nice, but "I didn't play as well as yesterday (Wednesday)."

Putting exceptionally well, Derry upset five-time champion Shirley Naysmith 2 and 1. The blonde Colwood golfer one-putted six successive greens and was approximately one over par in defeating Naysmith.

But "yesterday" came back to Pat when it counted Thursday. The putting touch showed up when Derry rolled in a 15-foot putt for a par that beat Uplands' promising young challenger on the first extra hole.

Two down after five holes, Stewart fought back to square accounts by the turn and was one up with two to play when Derry won the 17th with a par to forced the extra hole.

Toronto-raised, Derry played "some golf" as a junior, and an occasional game thereafter. However, it wasn't until five years ago that she was smitten by the golf bug. A familiar figure on Colwood's practice fairway, Pat's game has improved so much in the past few years that this year she elected to try out for British Columbia's interprovincial team.

Derry's appearance in the city final, therefore, comes as no great surprise.

For DeGirolamo, the semi-finals proved to be just as much of a breeze as was her advance throughtout the week. Medallist and defending champion, Dot was two under par for the 12 holes she played Thursday. In earlier matches this week, DeGirolamo defeated Oak Bay's Betty Forgie 8 and 7 and then eiminated Gorge Vale's Juanita Turner 6 and 5..

Creaking Warhorses May Handle Pressure

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — West Germany and Brazil, the two warhorses of World Cup soccer, stand as massive barriers blocking the title aspirations of Argentina, the Netherlands and Italy.

No matter that their creaking teams have lacked glitter in matches played so far in the tournament. They alone of the eight conteners have recent experience of the furnace-like pressure that accompanies the closing stages of the competition.

Action resumes Sunday in Group A and B of the second round with Italy meeting Austria, West Germany playing the Netherlands, Argentina meeting Brazil and Peru against Poland.

After the opening second-round games last Wednesday, the Dutch led Group A with two points, followed by West Germany and Italy with one apiece and Austria with none.

In Group B, Brazil leads with two points and a better goal difference than Argentina which also won its first game in the second round. Poland and Peru are winless.

Defending champion West Germany and Brazil have won five of the last six World Cups, while dominating world soccer for the last two decades.

Italy has won the World Cup twice but its last triumph was 40 years ago and most of its recent World Cup campaigns have ended in disaster.

Helmut Schoen, the West German manager, has been under fire for excessive caution. His Brazilian counterpart, Claudio Coutinho, has been criticized for the rigidity of his tactics.

But the fact remains that the two teams are still unbeaten.

West Germany has put a brake on Italy's hopes of winning the title. Manager Enzo Bearzot said Thursday that the scoreless draw with West Germany in the second round was a setback to the Italian chances.

Now the West Germans prepare to face the Netherlands, bursting with confidence after a 5-1 win against Austria.

Will the Dutch make the same mistake in the 1974 final when they took the lead in the first minute and sat back expecting victory? Instead, the Germans clawed their way back and won 2-1.

Schoen has yet to name his lineup but he is expected to place more emphasis on attack than in the game against Italy. Striker Dieter Mueller may be recalled in a 4-3-3 lineup.

The Dutch were expected to field the same team which crushed the Austrians as injured stars Johan Neeskens, Wim Rijsbergen and Wim Suurbier weren't expected to recover in time.

Youngsters Jan Poortvliet, Piet Wildschut and Ernie Brandsts seem certain to keep their places.

For Italy, Sunday's task is to collect as many goals as possible against the Austrians to help the Italians' goal difference should this be decisive in the group.

Bearzot said he expects to field the same team against Austria as he doesn't believe his forwards will be as unlucky as they were against West Germany.

Argentina, encouraged by its 2-0 win over Poland, hopes to have striker Leopoldo Luque fit for action.

UNDER-AGE SIGNINGS GOVERNMENT CONCERN?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should get tough on professional hockey to prevent further signings of under-age juniors, Stuart Leggatt, (NDP—New Westminster) said Thursday.

The signing of 17-year-old Wayne Gretzky to a $1.75 million personal services contract by Nelson Skalbania, owner of Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association, was the first of several deals, Leggatt told the Commons. He called on Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo to re-iterate the government's dim view of such signings.

Campagnolo said she hopes to name the chairman of a special study group on non-professional hockey by the end of the month. The group, mainly to study junior hockey, was recommended in the report of a special Commons-Senate committee on hockey.

There were also renewed reports the government is prepared to back demands to the International Ice Hockey Federation that it block a proposed WHA series with Soviet Union and Czechoslovakian teams to protest the signings.

Campagnolo has made it clear to the presidents of the two leagues of the government's opposition to the signings, but there was little she could do to block them.

Leggatt said the government should have acted on a recommendation by the hockey committee for bursaries and scholarships to allow players options other than turning professional for pursuit of their hockey careers.

Birmingham Boss Denies Retirement

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The owner of the World Hockey Association Birmingham Bulls, John Bassett, Jr., denies reports that he is folding the team.

Bassett said today: "Quoting Mark Twain, the reports of my death are greatly exaggerated. There will be hockey in Birmingham next season."

The London, Ont., Free Press said in today's editions that the Bulls would fold, leaving the WHA with six teams. Bassett said earlier that the story was "incredible."

"The reporter is wasting his time on a story like that."

The newspaper said in a dispatch from Montreal, site of the National Hockey League meetings, that a reliable source made the comment Thursday.

The Free Press said Bassett was reported to have sold two of his players to NHL teams, rookie sensation Ken Linseman to the Philadelphia Flyers and Tony McKegney to the Buffalo Sabres, before Thursday's amateur draft.

Philadelphia drafted Linseman in the first round Thursday. Bassett said the Flyers made a good choice, since, he said: "Kenny is the best player drafted by a country mile."

He said if the Flyers' offer was lucrative enough, he would consider a trade.

Linseman was signed by Birmingham as an under-age junior last year, when he was 19. He was the subject of a court case over the right of WHA teams to sign under-age players to professional contracts.

The Free Press said Philadelphia bought Linseman for an estimated $250,000.

McKegney, who like Linseman played for Kingston Canadians of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League, was selected in the second round by the Sabres.

Sox Thawing But Rangers 'Stink'

By The Associated Press

Manager Bob Lemon of Chicago White Sox thinks maybe his pitchers are finally thawing out, or drying out or something. Anyway, he knows they aren't giving up too many runs and the team is winning.

"Everybody keeps asking me that," said Lemon, who for the umpteenth time was questioned about the White Sox current fortunes—17 wins in 19 games and five in a row, including a 3-1 American League victory Thursday night over Texas Rangers.

"I don't know. The pitchers are pitching. We've got good defence."

In the past 19 games, the White Sox have yielded 48 runs, giving up more than three runs in only four games. Thursday night, right-hander Steve Stone, 6-4, went eight innings and gave up three hits before Lerrin LaGrow came on in the ninth for his seventh save.

"Maybe it's getting in rotation," Lemon said. "At the beginning of the season, it was cold. We'd have rainouts and guys would go five, six or seven days without a start."

Ron Blomberg drove in two of Chicago's runs with a homer, his fourth of the season, and a single. The other White Sox run scored on Bill Nahorodny's single.

Stone had a no-hitter through 5 2-3 innings before Bobby Thompson doubled and Mike Hargrove brought him home with a single. Stone began to lost the stuff on his breaking ball in the eighth, and LaGrow came in to pitch the ninth.

"I had very good control and I was throwing the ball exactly where I wanted to in every situation," said Stone, who added that he didn't mind being relieved since Jim Willoughby and LaGrow both have been hot out of the bullpen.

Texas now has lost three in a row, the Rangers longest losing streak since they lost eight in a row in April. Texas has scored just two runs in its past three games.

"All I can say is we stink," said Rangers outfielder Richie Zisk. "I hate to see our pitchers go out with that kind of team we have and lose that kind of game. It shouldn't happen."

Texas manager Billy Hunter said: "It's just frustrating when you have the kind of talent we have and you look at the scoreboard in the fifth inning and it says no hits next to the Rangers."

Elsewhere in the American League, California Angels downed Baltimore Orioles 5-1, Boston Red Sox defeated Oakland A's 7-3, New York Yankees beat Seattle Mariners 5-2 and Kansas City Royals clobbered Detroit Tigers 7-2. The Cleveland Indians at Minnesota Twins contest was rained out.

Ross Grimsley, John Montefusco and Rick Rhoden all pitched strongly in leading their teams to National League victories on the West Coast.

Montefusco pitched a complete game and struck out 11 as San Francisco Giants defeated Philadelphia Phillies 6-1.

The Montreal left-hander beat San Diego Padres 3-1 for his 11th triumph of the year, tops in the majors.

In the only other National League game, Rhoden and Charlie Hough combined on a five-hit 3-0 shutout for Los Angeles Dodgers over New York Mets.

"Even though our hitters have been in a slump lately," said Grimsley, 11-3. "I still had confidence they would get me enough runs to win just like they've been doing all season."

He added:

"This team is better than the Orioles," referring to his club last year. "If we had this outfield in Baltimore last year, we could have won the pennant."

That outfield consists of Andre Dawson, Warren Cromartie and Ellis Valentine, who hit his eighth homer of the season to support Grimsley and the Expos on Thursday.

Sooke-Becher Waters Yielding Hot Returns

Becher Bay to Pedder Bay waters continue to provide some of the hottest salmon fishing action on Vancouver Island.

Returns at Sooke dropped off since the weekend but the odd large chinook is still turning up. Gordon Robinson, fishing the Otter Point area, landed a 43½-pounder Tuesday night and then went out Wednesday to catch two weighing 31½ and 22 pounds.

Just before last weekend, Tuck Vowels boated a 45½-pounder and Carman Angus, who fishes a little further offshore than most, caught a 44½-pounder in waters between Secretary Island and Becher Bay.

Minnows and anchovies are the top baits and 50 feet seems to be the best depth to fish.

John Lukaz, trolling off Aldridge Point with a minnow, landed a 44½-pounder earlier this week and George Marios came in with a 38-pounder taken on strip near Beechey Head.

Waters between Aldridge and the Head have produced the top catches. Fish with strip, minnows or anchovies with as little as six ounces of weight and 40 feet of line or as much as two pounds and 100 feet of line.

* * *

Most of the top chinooks weighed in at Pedder Bay this week have come from the vicinity of Church Island. Tom Hosie caught a 34½-pounder there Wednesday and his wife, Elva, topped it with a 35-pounder the following day.

In the same spot Thursday, John Erlis caught another 35-pounder and Dennis Praud came in with a nice trio weighing 31¼, 24 and 23 pounds.

Anchovies are the top producer and most catches have been made with around two pounds of lead and 150 feet of line.

Sounder owners have been picking up readings of salmon between 70 and 90 feet in depth in the spot.

Drift-fishermen are starting to score off Oak Bay, where George Robertson topped the list with a 34½-pounder taken in The Gap on a Pirkens.

Fishing off Sidney has slowed down considerably although a few smaller chinooks have been landed off James Island.

Returns have also dropped off in the vinicity of Brentwood Bay but some good chinooks catches to 16 pounds are reported from The Narrows on strip, minnows and hootchies fished at about the 150 foot depth.

* * *

Further up-Island, chinooks to 15 pounds are being taken in Sansum Narrows on either trolled or mooched strip.

If anything, the dismal fishing picture off Nanaimo is worse this week.

At the mouth of Alberni Inlet, fishermen using just about every type of lure imaginable are landing numerous jacks to five pounds and a few chinooks to 28 have been picked up off Satellite Pass.

Bates Beach, Comox, Hornby Island and Denman Island waters are yielding coho to seven pounds on bucktails, flashtails and hootchies.

Southeasterly winds have plagued fishermen at Campbell River but those ardent enough to get out on the water early in the mornings while it's still calm are catching coho to five pounds. The Red Buoy, Grey Buoy and Salmon Point areas were mentioned as top choices but most of the action has been on deep gear using lures resembling shrimp.

A few chinooks to 30 pounds have also turned up in scattered locations.

Freshwater anglers are still picking up a few good catches in a number of Island areas.

Some of the top trouting spots are Cowichan, Dickson, Elsie, Great Central, Upper Campbell and Buttle lakes.

Nelford One Shot Behind Pacesetter

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Barney Thompson offset a pair of bogies with six birdies Thursday—one with a 55-foot putt—to shatter a logjam at the top and take the first-round lead of a $100,00 golf tournament with a 68.

Thomspon, 29, fired nines of 35-33 for his four-under-par score.

Bunched at 69 were Rex Caldwell, Bobby Walzel, New Zealand's John Lister, Jim Nelford of Burnaby, Bill Calfee and Greg Powers.

Dave Barr of Kelowna shot nines of 40-34 for a two-over-par 74.

There were 46 at par or better scores and 79 in the field of 155 shot 74 or better over the wind-swept course.

Thirteen at 70 included 1976 winner Ed Sabo and Jerry Heard, who won the Atlanta tournament last month and has earned $74,582 already this year.

The field will be cut to the low 70 and ties after today's round.

Lion Rookie Traded to Als

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions Thursday traded rookie defensive end Phil Luke to Montreal Alouettes for a second-round draft choice in the 1979 Canadian Football League amateur selections.

Luke, from Simon Fraser University, was one of the Lions' two protected players from the 1978 draft. He was unable to beat out holdovers Gary Robinson, Frank Landy or Doug Seymour in the defensive line.

The Lions now have 49 players on their roster.

Demanding Cherry Hills Humbles Open Hopefuls

DENVER (AP) — Ben Crenshaw's eight on the par-four 16th hole was testimony to it. So were Tom Kite's seven on the par-four 18th, and the pair of double-bogeys that stung defending champion Hubert Green.

"I thought the golf course certainly had the upper hand on most of the fellows today," said Jack Nicklaus, whose two-over-par 73 put him four strokes behind first-round leader Hale Irwin at the 78th United States Open golf championship.

Difficult pin placements, a swirling wind and Cherry Hills' deep rough caused scores to soar Thursday.

"If these conditions continue, 290 might win," said Nicklaus, who earlier in the week had predicted the winner would need a four-round total of less than 280.

Only four players bettered par, led by Irwin's conservatively-played 69. Andy North, J. C. Snead and 18-year-old amateur Bob Clampett carded one-under 70s.

"This country club golf course that I heard someone call it earlier in the week has turned into something more than that," said Arnold Palmer, who was commissioned to toughen up the layout for this year's event. "This course is playing very difficult."

Palmer, whose only Open title came at Cherry Hills in 1960, suffered a double-bogey five in a bout with the rough at No. 15 and finished at 76.

It could have been worse. Lanny Wadkins—the Professional Golfers' Association champion—had a 77, as did Tom Weiskopf. Crenshaw, 1973 Open winner Johnny Miller and 1975 champion Lou Graham took 78s. Carding 79s were Steve Melnyk, Rik Massengale and Gil Morgan. Fuzzy Zoeller took an 80.

Then there was Bob Impaglia, a 25-year-old from Auburn, N.Y., who qualified for his tour card last week. Impaglia's problems weren't as directly related to the course as to officials of the U.S. Golf Association.

He had been cruising along with a one-over 36 on the front nine when the USGA socked him with a two-stroke penalty for slow play—the first such penalty ever issued against a player in an Open. Impaglia promptly came apart, ballooning to a 47 on the back side for an 83.

It wasn't the highest score of the day, however. That honor went to Jeff Coston, who shot 89.

Billy Casper, a two-time Open winner who was given a special exemption to play here, summed up the difficulty of the course as well as anyone.

"I feel shell-shocked," he said.

Casper finished with a 71, thanks to a miracle shot on the 17th hole when his wedge to the green was short and landed in water—but hit a rock and bounced up beside the green. He sank the 18-foot putt for a birdie.

It seemed only Irwin had the secret to playing Cherry Hills, and even he started out with a bogey.

Irwin was saddled with his lone bogey at the first hole, where, he said, he was a little nervous "and got a little greedy.".

"I had no reason to go at the hole. I did and I paid for it."

After that lesson, Irwin settled into his cautious game plan.

Clampett, a freshman at Brigham Young University last season, rammed home a pair of 30-foot putts on the 12th and 13th holes en route to a closing 34 and his one-under 70.

Clampett, who shagged balls for some of the pros at the 1972 Open, said he is "normally a good putter but not that good.".

Le Car is here.

At last, an economy car that doesn't economize on fun.

Unlike a lot of small cars, Le Car's a ball to drive. Rather than a bore.

Which is why in Europe, where driving is as much a passion as a means of transportation, there are more Le Cars on the road than Rabbits and Fiestas combined.

A lot of things contribute to Le Car's fun. Like a combination of standard features you won't find on Rabbit or Civic. Including front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, torsion bar suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials. All of which aid performance. There's even an optional sun roof, so big we call it a Fun Roof.

Le Car doesn't economize on comfort either.

Le Car has an extra long wheelbase to provide an extra smooth ride.

And it comes with the most comfortable seats this side of your living room.

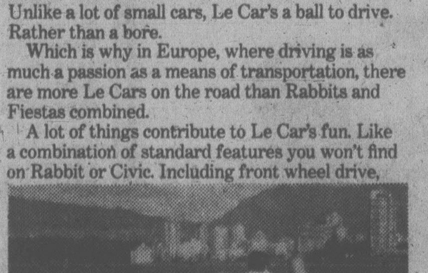
For an extra measure of comfort Le Car gives you more front and rear headroom than Rabbit and Civic. Even a wider hatch.

Yet Le Car slips into parking spaces they'd have to pass up.

In fact, the only thing Le Car economizes on is gas. Getting 57 mpg (92 km/g) on the highway,* and 40 mpg (64 km/g) in the city.*

Test drive one at your nearest Renault dealer soon. You'll realize for all its fun, Le Car is one small car you should seriously consider.

Some of the equipment illustrated optional at extra cost.
*Based on Transport Canada approved standards.



Le Fun Offer

We believe that if you drive Le Car, you'll like it. So we're offering a free "Le Car Freak" T-Shirt if you test drive Le Car before June 30, 1978.

PLAN BY PRIVATE OLYMPIC COMMITTEE

Break for Taxpayers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley's private Olympic committee will go to Montreal next week armed with U.S. Olympic Committee approval to form a group that would assume all financial risk for the 1984 Summer Games and leave taxpayers risk-free, the committee head said Thursday.

The USOC decision means the city could be freed of any financial liability, if the International Olympic Committee agrees to deal with the private non-profit panel exclusively, said John Argue, chief of Bradley's organizing committee.

"Somebody has to step up to the line and agree to be responsible to put on the Games," Argue told a news conference. "The right party to take that responsibility is the organizing committee.

"So, what we do is we have the organizing committee sign the contract and they assume that responsibility. The city does not sign the contract. The city does not assume that responsibility. It's just that simple," Argue said. But he added any agreement would be submitted to city council before it is signed.

The IOC has provisionally awarded the Games to Los Angeles but said it could not insure the city against financial losses. Argue said he is confident the Montreal meetings will yield a quick agreement.

Bradley, meanwhile, told a separate news conference that the council will have to review any contract the committee negotiates with the IOC.

"No one can say if they (the committee) will go it alone or with the city," said Bradley spokeswoman Brenda Banks. "He (Bradley) wants to wait and see what they come back with and then we will see what happens."

Councilman Ernani Bernardi, who predicted city liability for the Gameswould lead to a "financial fiasco," said:

"There are two ways the city can be protected. One is not to host the Olympics at all. The other is to have an independent, outside committee or organization that deals directly with the IOC, to assume all financial liability. . . .

"If it (the committee) isn't independent," Bernardi said, "then I can't support it. If it is going to be dictated to by the mayor and the council, then we're in trouble. . . . The worst thing that can happen is for the council and mayor to have an active veto or any part in the negotiations."

OLDTIMERS PRIMED FOR BOOT TUSSLE

Victoria and Vancouver will open their annual two-game, total-goal oldtimers' soccer tournament Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

Game time is 12 noon and the second game will be played the following weekend in Vancouver.

Barry Sadler is expected to handle goaltending duties for Victoria while other probable starters include defenders Charlie Mills and Alec Allan, links George Paul and Don McIntosh and forwards Willie McMillan, Ian Harris and Alf Hegen.

Chummy Gilmour, Dave McGrewer, Peter Moran and Ian Craig are included on the roster of defending-champion Vancouver.

Tulsa, Toronto Record Victories

By The Canadian Press

Ivan Lukacevic scored at 2:16 Thursday night and Toronto Metros-Croatia went on to a 2-0 North American Soccer League victory over Fort Lauderdale Strikers before a home-town crowd of 4,592.

Ray Tracey added an insurance goal for Toronto with less than five minutes left to play when he knocked a rebound past Strikers goalkeeper Gordon Banks.

Toronto goalkeeper Zaljko Bilecki recorded his fifth shutout of the season and the win brought Toronto's record to 6-9. The Strikers are 8-9.

In the only other NASL game Thursday, Bill Sautter scored the winning goal with 20 minutes to play to give Tulsa Roughnecks a 3-2 victory over Rochester Lancers before 9,878 fans at Tulsa.

Billy Caskey and Brian Smith scored Tulsa's first two goals to provide the Roughnecks with a 2-0 lead.

Rochester then tied the score before halftime on goals by Joszef Horvath and Pat Ercoli.

Tulsa outshot the Lancers 21-12 in the game and Rochester goalkeeper Svilar was forced to make six saves to Colin Bolton's three.

The win moved Tulsa to a 9-8 record and one point out of second in their division behind Dallas Tornado. Rochester now is 7-9.

Government Policies On Gambling Illogical

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks accused the federal government Thursday of being illogical and unco-ordinated in its policies on gambling.

At news conferences in six other Canadian cities as well—Regina, Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver—the NACRT voiced objection to the government's new numbers game scheme, wherein a player can bet $1 and punch numbers into a computer terminal to win instant cash.

NACRT president Jack Kenney described the fitness and amateur sport ministry's scheme, which will begin in late 1978 or early 1979, as being a ". . . very prolific system of legalized gambling."

Kenney, who is also president of the Ontario Jockey Club, sees an inconsistency in the department of agriculture delaying legislation to permit off-track betting in Canada with the introduction of the numbers game.

The organization wants a meeting with Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, whose department supervises pari-mutuel wagering. Whelan has been opposed to off-track betting because of the possibility it might hurt smaller tracks.

Representatives from the ministry of agriculture told a committee of the House of Commons last month that it may be necessary to have a study made into the moral and social implications of off-track betting.

After a meeting last January the government said it would try to work out a consensus of opinion from members of the racing industry on off-track betting. A government meeting was also held in March 31 but no further meetings are scheduled.

Kenney felt it was strange that so little progress has been made in five months while another government department could have the numbers game system ready to go in five months.

Ranching of High River, Alta., took second place and Bo Mearns of Victoria rode Strider, which she also owns, to a third-place finish.

DRIVER DIES

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — An Ontario stock car driver died early today of injuries suffered when his car slammed into a concrete wall during a race at the Mount Clemens race track, authorities said.

James Smith, 32, of Corruna, Ont., near Sarnia, was taken to hospital and died during surgery after the crash Thursday night, said sheriff's deputies.

Flurry of Activity Before Majors' Trading Deadline

By The Associated Press

Outfielder Gary Thomasson and catcher Gary Alexander of Oakland A's were among those who changed uniforms as the major league baseball trading deadline came to a close Thursday night.

Thomasson was sent to New York Yankees in exchange for outfielder Dell Alston and infielder Mickey Klutts and "a substantial amount of cash," said an A's spokesman.

Thomasson, who was traded by San Francisco Giants earlier this year as part of the Vida Blue deal, hit .201 with five home runs and 16 runs batted in for 47 games with the A's.

Klutts played in one game for the Yankees before he broke his thumb April 22. Alston was hitless in three appearances with the Yankees, batting .347 with Tacoma in the Pacific Coast League.

The A's also shipped Alexander to Cleveland for outfielder Joe Wallis, himself acquired a few hours before in a deal the Indians made with Chicago Cubs.

Wallis, who had a .309 batting average with one homer and six RBI, was obtained earlier by Cleveland for minor league outfielder Mike Vail.

The Cubs acquired right-handed pitcher Lynn McGlothen from the Giants for outfielder Hector (Heity) Cruz and a player to be named later in lieu of cash.

McGlothen did not start a game for San Francisco this season. In 1977, he was 2-9 and had a 3.63 earned-run average. Cruz was batting .225 this season.

The Giants acquired two players in separate deals. In their quest for bench strength, they first obtained infielder Roger Metzger from Houston Astros for either a player to be named later or cash.

Metzger was Houston's regular shortstop for six years before becoming a part-time player the last two seasons. He entered the 1978 season with a lifetime .223 batting average and is batting .220 this season.

The Giants later acquired the contract of outfielder Jim Dwyer from St. Louis Cardinals. A team spokesman said the Cardinals owed the Giants a player as a result of the deal in which they acquired Frank Riccelli from San Francisco last winter.

In a late deal, Atlanta Braves traded right-hander Dick Ruthven to Philadelphia Phillies for relief pitcher Gene Garber and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Garber had a 2-1 record with three saves and a 1.38 earned-run averagewith the Phillies in 22 games this season. Ruthven had a 2-6 record with a 4.11 ERA in 13 starts this season.

Boston Red Sox, beating the dealing deadline by minutes, sold veteran outfielder Bernie Carbo to the Indians for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Carbo, 30, had been sidelined since suffering an ankle injury in Detroit May 21. In 17 games this season, he batted .261 with one homer and six runs batted in.

JUNIORS SELECTED FOR ISLAND SQUAD

Selected to the rep team were Udhe Basi, Bill Clarke, Dion McGregor, Geoffrey McShannon, Christopher Wilson, Dean Doan, John Clarke, James Fisher, Peter Spear, James Kneip, Grant Anderson, Ken Bracewell, Bryan Swanberg, Ross Robertson and Tim Baker.

Two teams from the league participated in the eighth annual Falcons invitational tourament in South Delta last weekend and both came away with 0-4 records against their more-experienced Lower Mainland opponents.

Sailing Spectaculars for the Onshore Types

AROUND OUR SHORES
pat dufour

Two international sailing events take place here on the weekend that could provide some good spectaculars for onshore watchers.

One is the third annual Canadian Cal 20 championships, to be raced out of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Harry Marshall reports that a fleet of roughly 28 boats is expected to compete in the five-race series.

At least one competitor is expected to be from San Francisco, trucking his boat to Port Townsend and sailing here from that point.

Racing will start at 10 a.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

The sturdy miniature ocean racers were designed by Bill Lapworth for the stiff breezes of San Francisco Bay many years ago and are still highly popular because of their seaworthiness and ability to handle like a dinghy.

We ordered our old Galenaia after seeing Cal 20s in action on the Bay. She never let us down, handling five consecutive Juan de Fucas as if to the manner born.

* * *

The other event, which should prove interesting to Dallas Road shorewatchers, is the annual Hobie Cat 16 race between Port Angeles and Victoria, a distance of about 20 miles.

These speedy catamarans can reach speeds of 25 knots in the right wind.

On Saturday there will be a race from the Port Angeles Yacht Club, beginning at 10 a.m. and ending in the Ogden Point area. The race will be sailed in reverse on Sunday, starting at the same time.

The annual sailout is jointly sponsored by the Hobie Cats North West, Seattle, and the North Cove Hobie Cats, Victoria.

The defending champion is Peter Yanciw of Vancouver.

Mark Philbrook with Eric Jespersen as crew will man one Victoria entry while the other Victoria boat in the race will be sailed by Ron McLeod and Stephen Knight.

Mark reports the annual race can be "a real bone-shaker"

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have its annual race to Roche Harbor on Saturday, baginning 10 a.m. at Cadboro Bay. In Esquimalt Harbor, the squadron's centreboarders will have dinghy racing Sunday. Start time is 1 p.m.

Three Kitsilano Yacht Club sailors topped the fleet in the invitational Fireball regatta hosted by the squadron on the weekend. Lane Dexter won, to be followed by Brett Willets and Peter Standeven.

Paul Jensen's Dania was the over-all winner in the Cole Cup race for the squadron's cruising class boats and Sailerettes, raced on Sunday. Runners-up were Fred Douglas' Vertu and Ed Haines' Lotte.

Gary Jacobi, helming Salty Dream won the Catalina 27 single-handed race. After Salty Dream came Ron Jewula's Beowolf, Jack Trueman's L'Chaiim, John Ciceri's Volare, Orville White's Norma V and Mike Williams' Achilles.

The RVYC will have series racing again Wednesday, things getting under way at 6:30 p.m.

Andrew Burton, Jim Allen and Mike Williams were the top Laser sailors this week. In Cal 20s it was Don North's Polaris, Tony Marshall's Sunbeam and Ed Life's Semiramis.

Louise Anstey helmed Bob Grundison's Owl to first place in Thunderbird competition, edging out Bill Sloane's Desire and Gordy Nickells' Redskin.

Dave Richardson skippered Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry to top spot in Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet racing. Next came Anne Porter in Errigal and Piute Logic, skippered by Rod Andrews and Rick Parkinson.

* * *

RVYC's Bob Smith was mistaken for a commercial fishermen by the United States Coast Guard last Saturday morning when he had the paravanes down on Scot Free while helping in the long offshore race of the three-quarter ton world championships.

Bob reports the coast guard types were very polite and most co-operative once they found there was no threat of a fish war.

* * *

SHORT TACKS — This week's award for understatement has to go to Rick Todd of RVYC. He and his wife Delia set off 6 a.m. Tuesday in their Pacific 30 Outpatient, which they built themselves, bound for a three-month holiday to Hawaii and back. Rick shunned any publicity, saying he and Delia were "just going out for a sail."

'King' Served Well By Bateman's Bat

John Bateman's booming bat and the expert pitching of Eddie Feigner combined to give the King and His Court, thefour-man touring softball squad, a 15-7 victory over the Heywood League All-Stars in an exhibition game Thursday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Bateman, a former National League baseball catcher with Houston Astros and Montreal Expos, smashed out five home runs off the best pitchers in the Heywood Men's League while Feigner, the "King," dazzled the crowd of about 900 with his usual array of trick pitching.

But Feigner was also tagged for some big hits by Heywood, including two home runs by catcher Dwayne Robinson.

Meanwhile, in Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play, Dave Standey and Lorne Bowden combined to pitch a two-hitter as Ingraham Hotel edged Bateson's Karate School 1-0 in a nine-inning contest at Central Park.

Standey gave up singles to Pat Strandlund and Al Strandlund in eight innings before being pulled for a pinch-hitter. Bowden finished off the ninth inning.

Al Strandlund held Ingraham to a pair of singles until the ninth frame when Barry Burch led off with a single and scored the lone run on singles by Pete Isaacson and Theo Van den Bergh.

At Hyacinth Park, GSV Combos tripped Strawberry Vale Juniors 5-3 and Victoria Athletics pounded Ingraham Hotel 20-1 in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

Pam Jones pitched a five-hitter for Combos and helped her own cause by hitting two singles and driving in one run. Leadoff batter Lindy Arnold scored three runs for Combos after getting hit once and being walked three times in four trips to the plate.

Cheryl Linn set the batting pace for Athletics with a triple, a double and two singles to score four times. Kay Thorne scattered seven hits for the pitching Victory.

Batesons	000 000 000—	0	2	0
Ingraham	000 000 001—	1	5	0

Al Strandlund and Terry Strandlund; Dave Sandey, Lorne Bowden (9) and Dean Sawyer.

Buttons Winners

Norman Wallace and Jack Pierpoint of Uplands defeated Al Dowds and Gordon Perry of Glen Meadows on the 16th hole to win the Victoria seniors golf buttons match at Royal Colwood.

Competition starts at 6.

Islanders Earn Scholarships

Officials of the B.C. Amateur Football Association have announced the granting of two more $500 scholarships.

Mark Townsend of Victoria and Peter Wilson of Duncan were the latest to recieve the awards.

Townsend has played football for six years, starting at the bantam level. During his last season with Victoria Dolphins of the B.C. Big Four Junior League, the 18-year-old graduate of Mt. Douglas High School was named the team's most-valuable player.

He will attend the University of British Columbia.

Wilson has played football for five years, two with the Cowichan Chiefs and then three with the Timbermen.

He graduated from Cowichan High School in 1976 after being named the school's athlete of the year and has played one season with Simon Fraser University as a linebacker.

Wilson plans to graduate from Simon Fraser with a degree in commerce and then pursue a career in the Canadian Football League, "hopefully on the same team as by brother."

Alan Wilson, a CFL all-star centre, plays with the B.C. Lions.

The third recipient of a $500 scholarship, John Campbell of Victoria, was announced last week.

The scholarships are funded through Football B.C., the lottery branch of the BCAFA.

Carter Backed on Uranium

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House International Relations Committee has approved President Carter's plan to export 17,000 pounds of uranium to India's biggest nuclear power station, apparently assuring continued U.S. atomic fuel shipments to India.

By a 2-2 tie vote, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) had held up the export to India. But President Carter overturned that decision and approved the shipment. Then a resolution was introduced in Congress to reverse the president and uphold the NRC.

By voice vote, however, the House committee voted down this "resolution of disapproval" to block the uranium export to India. The resolution had been signed by 57 House members but the committee vote was heavily against blocking the shipment.

"If this licence is denied . . . India would become totally non-co-operative on the nuclear proliferation question," said Rep. Jonathan Bingham (D—N.Y.).

The House committee vote almost assures that the 17,000-pound shipment to India will be allowed. The full House may still vote on the issue on the floor and the Senate may take it up within the next two weeks, but sentiment in both the House and Senate is with the president on the export licence.

It would take a majority of both the House and Senate to disapprove the export.

"My feeling is that in a matter of this kind the president is entitled to the benefit of the doubt," said Sen. Frank Church (D—Idaho), second ranking Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee. "We can't be engaged in a constant guerrilla war about this issue."

Central to the issue are attempts by the U.S. to get India to sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and accept international inspections of two plutonium extraction plants and two research reactors it operates that are not under such safeguards.

India has consistently refused to sign the NPT treaty or accept safeguards until the super powers agree to stop making nuclear weapons and begin nuclear disarmament talks. But in a talk with reporters this week, Prime Minister Morarji Desai appeared to soften India's position.

Desai said India "immediately" will agree to inspections on its unsafegurded facilities if the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain agree to ban all underground nuclear weapons tests and agree to reduce and not add to their current nuclear arsenals.

First RC Rites In 400 Years For UK MPs

LONDON (Reuter) — A Roman Catholic mass will be celebrated in the Anglican Chapel of the House of Commons next month for the first time since the 16th century.

The announcement is likely to anger some sections of the Church of England, Britain's established church. The Protestant Reformation Society said it may challenge its legality in court.

The mass is to mark the 500th anniversary this year of the birth of Saint Thomas More.

It is believed to be the first time a Catholic mass has been held in Westminster since early in the 16th century when King Henry VIII cut off Roman Catholicism ties and declared himself head of the new Church of England.

The mass was planned for July 6, the anniversary of More's death.

Permission had to be granted by the Queen as supreme head of the Church of England.

'Coffee Genocide'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Amnesty International Thursday charged that although Uganda President Idi Amin has declared 1978 a year of "peace and reconciliation" the pattern of arbitrary arrests, disappearances, torture and killings "persist unaltered" under his dictatorship.

The human rights monitoring group that was awarded the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize said that from 50,000 to 300,000 persons have been arbitrarily killed in the African nation since Amin came to power in 1971.

Unless international pressure is increased on Uganda, "there is good reason to fear" that human rights violations of the same scale "could continue for a long time to come," the volunteer group said in a report to the Senate subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy.

The report was released as the Senate was urged to bar U.S. coffee imports from Uganda in an effort to topple Amin's regime.

"I feel very strongly that this nation cannot sit idly by while genocide is being practiced in Uganda," Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho) said.

Backhoe Probes for Bodies

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The backhoe ripping through a tiny yard behind a tarpaper shanty is looking for bodies.

The shack's owner, a burly, bearded pawnbroker with reported Nazi sympathies, is sitting in jail today, suspected of luring young homosexuals from New York's Greenwich Village to torture sessions with leg irons and chains.

Kenneth Appleby, 27, whose friends described him as a "gentleman" and the "greatest human alive," was held in lieu of $100,000 bail on a charge of kidnapping.

Today police resumed their digging, bringing in a second backhoe to continue their search for bodies.

"We found nothing," police Capt. Richard Kulig reported after 10 hours of digging Wednesday.

A spokesman for District Attorney Matthew Ryan said: "There is sado-masochism and homosexual evidence. Of the Nazism, I wouldn't rule it out."

Police earlier found chains, leg irons and whips in the house.

Friends, neighbors and the authorities painted conflicting word portraits of Appleby.

Moluccan Says Killing Proved He Could Kill

ASSEN, Netherlands (Reuter) — The young leader of a South Moluccan guerrilla squad testified Thursday that he shot dead an unarmed hostage to show the Dutch government he was ready to kill.

In answer to questions from Judge Frans Fliek, Frans Leatemia, 23, said he shot the hostage to prove he could kill if he wanted to.

"Would you do it again?" the judge asked.

"If it's for the cause, I would do it all over again," Leatemia said. "The Dutch people must give us recognition."

Leatemia and two other South Moluccans are charged with the murder of civil servant Karel de Groot, 40, a provincial town planning office head, during a siege drama here last March.

Three guerrillas, holding 70 hostages, took over the Assen headquarters of the provincial government in an attempt to force the Dutch government into backing their demands for an independent republic of the South Moluccas, now a part of Indonesia.

Leatemia, and Hendrik Helaha, and Eliaser Kakisina, both 20, are also charged with hostage-taking and firearms offences which together carry a penalty of 20 years imprisonment.

Helaha admitted firing two or three shots at de Groot whose body lay in the grounds of the Assen building until the next day when Dutch marines burst in and saved the remaining hostages shortly before the guerrillas planned to start shooting them.

No Ferry Decision: Alaska

SEATTLE (AP) — Alaska Governor Jay Hammond said Thursday that no decision has been made to move his state's southern ferry terminal from Seattle to Bellingham.

"The ferry terminal will be located in the area which is concluded to be in the best interest of the people of the state (of Alaska)," he said here.

On another issue, Hammond repeated his warning about not travelling to Alaska to look for work.

"We have too many people for the jobs available and a great influx of people to Alaska aggravates the situation," he said.

No Harm in 2,4-D, Biologist Contends

PENTICTON (CP) — The British Columbia water investigations branch contends that there would be no harmful effects as a result of use of the herbicide 2,4-D to combat Eurasian milfoil weed in the Okanagan Lakes system.

Dr. Peter Newroth, a biologist with the branch, told the final hearing of the pesticides control appeal board Wednesday that: "I can't say it (the chemical) is totally safe, only relatively safe."

Newroth also said that new mechanical harvesting methods, suggested by several groups as a way of eliminating the weed, would be too costly and would not be fast enough to meet the needs of the project.

Valter Raudsepp, appeal board chairman, said a decision on the findings would be released next week.

Earlier Wednesday, Peter Scales, a spokesman for the water investigations branch, said that provincial government crews are ready to begin applying 2,4-D to the lakes as soon as the board approves permits.

Scales said, however, application would be delayed two weeks while local residents were warned of the applications and alternative water supplies were arranged.

Dr. David Clarke, medical director of the South Okanagan health unit, told the board Tuesday that he believes the chemical would be harmful and "it is my job to protect the drinking water."

"In my area of the Okangan, there are over 600 water intakes and 120,000 people," he said. "They wake up and worry about grapes. I worry about their water."

Her Mother Got Her Going

MISS RUTH KING

A mother who believed in education is given credit by Miss Ruth King for her choice of teaching as a career.

Now, on the eve of retirement and after some 40 years in the profession — almost 32 of them as principal of Langford Elementary School — she speaks of growing up on a farm near Regina.

Her parents were "education minded" and her mother would say, over and over again, that an education was easy to carry around.

"There is no doubt she was the influence, or the guiding light that turned my thoughts to teaching."

Miss King went to public and high school and took normal school teacher training in Regina.

Her first position, at the age of 17, was in a small community in what was known as North Saskatchewan's big timber area.

This was followed by several years at North Battleford and then, in January, 1947, a move to British Columbia and to the Langford school.

It didn't look then like it does today.

The original square wooden building was still in use and classes were also being held in two separate rooms close to it, with a playground in between.

A year later the playground was moved and a section added between those two rooms to make a complete unit, forerunner of the present large complex on Jacklin Road.

Miss King remembers when she first became principal that student enrolment was "something like 150 to 160."

This number increased to a peak of 620, several years ago, and at present stands at 500.

Three times during peak registration the school was on swing shifts, and over the years, four portables have been added for extra classes.

On top of that five schools have been opened in the area "without taking too many children away from us."

She started her Langford career with four teachers, including herself. Today she has 23 on staff with her.

In the beginning primary classes numbered as many as 35 youngsters and the intermediates as many as 42. Now the average is 24 and 28.

Curriculum in early days concentrated on the basics, or core studies as they are named now.

Reading, writing and arithmetic came first.

"Now we have a much broader program including social studies, French, music, counselling and many other divisions of work."

To keep up with this ever widening curriculum, Miss King regularly attended summer school and sat in on numerous workshops.

Despite her many administrative duties she has always gone into the classrooms to teach, when needed.

If a substitute is not available for any grade, she fills in at a moment's notice.

And she enjoys doing it "especially if it is in English or art classes."

She takes pride in telling you that grandmothers and mothers, once her pupils and now named as friends, still remain interested in the school because third generations of their families are students there now.

Large families too, in which every child has attended the school.

Among these she speaks of Peter and Marilyn Hansen, friends of long standing, whose six children have gone through the grades, with the youngest graduating this year.

Every vice-principal on her staff has gone on to become a principal.

"All except one as heads of schools right here in the district."

Wayne King, once a vice-principal and more recently principal of Colwood Elementary School, will take her place at Langford Elementary in September.

Here she laughs and says "I can't claim him as a relative. It's just coincidence that his surname is the same as mine."

Miss King has done her share of extra-curricular work during her teaching years.

She has been president of the Sooke Teachers' Association and is an active member of both the South Vancouver Island and the British Columbia Principals' Associations.

She is a member of the prestigious Canadian College of Teachers, an honor that only comes after a name is submitted and strict guidelines passed.

Perhaps her deepest satisfaction arises however, from the fact that, over the years, she has had the full support, in everything she has attempted and accomplished, first from a parent-teacher association and more recently from the Langford School Association.

To honor the retiring principal the School Association has arranged a reception for next Monday evening (June 19) from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the school. And it is expected that many former and present pupils and teachers will attend.

In charge of arrangements is Maxine Fraser Marshall, an ex-pupil of the school, long-time friend of the principal and the mother of two young graduates from that school.

So far, Ruth King says, there has been little or no time to remember she will be retiring in a couple of weeks.

Even when the school term ends there will be very few moments to think about it for she is taking off, almost immediately, for a Mediterranean cruise.

"It's when I return that it will hit me," she says. "All of a sudden I'll realize I'm not going back to Langford Elementary in the fall and I'll have to think of new ways to fill my days."

Here she looked at me, smiled, nodded her smartly coiffured head and said quietly — "I've got plans!"

Both Wanted Family Cat

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Mary Foss, 24, and her husband James, 29, of Madison, agreed on the division of all their worldly property in their divorce suit except for one point—who would get the family cat.

Dane County Judge William Buenzli vetoed the couple's request for joint custody of the cat, which he said was the first such proposal he had received in 40 years on the bench.

"They were serious about it, it wasn't a gag," Buenzli said. "I didn't intend to put the court in the position of supervising custody of a cat. We should devote our time to children."

Buenzli granted the divorce, awarding the cat to Ms. Foss, who had it at her home at the time.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: You aren't going to believe this, but my husband has been eligible for Social Security for two years, and he has yet to collect a dime of it!

Why? He says that as long as he's able to work, he doesn't feel justified in taking money from the government. I think he's crazy. What do you think? — MOREY'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Social Security isn't exactly "welfare" from the government. Since the mid-30s working people have kicked in part of every paycheque in order to build up some retirement income. Your husband is entitled to do as he wishes, but he's also entitled to the money.

DEAR ABBY: I know you will find this hard to believe, but every word of it is true:

There is an elderly gentleman (about 85) living in a small single room in a local hotel. This man has married children and grandchildren in town who hardly look at him.

He can't dress himself or bathe very well, and his eyesight is failing, so the maids help him. (The maids take better care of him than his own family.)

Several months ago, a maid found him on the bathroom floor. He had fallen the night before and couldn't get up, so he just lay there, cold and shivering, all night.

He eats only once a day on a tray sent to his room, and that's usually oatmeal and coffee. On Sundays the kitchen is closed, so he doesn't eat from Saturday until Monday morning.

How can people be so heartless? Today is Sunday, and believe me, Abby, my appetite is gone just thinking about that poor, old, neglected man. — FEELING SAD.

DEAR SAD: If you really want to help, why don't YOU look in on the old gentleman? (You don't have to be a relative to extend a kindness.)

Writing to me without a clue as to who YOU are, who HE is, or even the city in which he lives, is futile. And your loss of appetite won't help him much, either.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl who has just started to date. I am going to ask you a question I have asked many others; I have never been able to get a straight answer from anyone.

When a girl really likes a fellow, and they are alone together, naturally they are going to make out some. But how far should a girl go?

DEAR JUST: The limits of self-respect will provide the answer. A boy who has genuine affection for a girl will never do anything that will degrade her or make her feel ashamed. Courtship is preparation for marriage; ask any boy how far he would like the girl he marries to go on a date. And if he's honest, you'll have an honest answer.

Plant Your Newspapers

In the following article, Mother Earth reader Dottie Goudy explains a good way to recycle newspapers.

Your daily newspaper can be the best friend your garden plants ever had. In fact, I find newspapers so useful during the growing season that I collect them year round.

I think you'll find mulching with newspapers to be a long-time dream come true. If you've always wanted a quick and easy way to deal with weeds, you'll see that newspaper mulch provides just that. Once your layer of papers is in place, you can forget about that section of the vegetable patch for the rest of the season — you're done with hoeing and weeding. Also, mulching regulates the temperature of the soil, adds fertility and conserves moisture.

Most crops — melons, beans, tomatoes, peppers, etc. — should be mulched when the plants have reached a height of four or five inches. Prepare the ground around the crops to receive the covering of paper by first hoeing out any weeds that are as tall as (or taller than) the cultivated plants. (The smaller weeds will be smothered by the mulch.)

Early morning and late evening are the best times for laying down a mulch. The wind usually is calmer then, which makes it easier to spread out a complete row of newspapers before weighting them down with hay.

If you want to mulch closely spaced crops, forget about the weeds growing between individual plants within a row. The foilage of such crops discourages germination well enough to do away with any need for slitting each sheet of paper and fitting it down around each plant. Instead, just peel a five- or six-sheet layer from your supply of papers and butt the ground covering up against the stems of the plants at one end of the row. Then continue putting down similar layers of newspaper along that side of the row, allowing two or three inches of overlap for each new section of mulch. When you're done with that side, repeat the process on the other side of the row.

As soon as possible, weight down the layers of newspapers so they'll stay put for the rest of the season.

Widely spaced crops are handled a little differently. For them, you should lay down your papers so they overlap both between and across the rows and completely fill all the spaces between the plants.

To do that, put down the first layer of five or six sheets of unfolded newspaper alongside one end of the first row, with the long side of the section of mulch parallel to the plants. Next — opposite each plant — tear a one-inch deep "V" notch in the edge of the newspaper. Then butt the layer of mulching against the plants, so the bases of their stems fit into the notches. Finally, cover the ground around the rest of the row in the same way on both sides and weight the newspapers.

Of course, newspaper can be used for other things. In the spring, for instance, I protect tender young transplants from the sun with little tents constructed from the material. To make these enclosures, I place a single, folded sheet over each plant like a pup tent, leaving the ends open for good ventilation. Then, I anchor the bottom ends of each with clods of dirt.

You can use newspapers for blanching celery, too. Just gather a plant into a close bunch, wrap it several times with a five- or six-ply layer of newsprint, and tie it off with a few turns of strong cord. Then, at harvest time, simply cut the celery stalks off at their bases and peel away the paper tubes.

Sure, I'll grant that newspapers are sometimes bulky and difficult to read, but for gardening they're perfect.

CHICKEN SOUP: IT WORKS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Researchers at Mount Sinai Medical Centre say they have proved what some mothers have known for years — hot chicken soup is "efficacious upper respiratory tract infection therapy."

Translation: It's good for colds.

Drs. Kiumars Saketkhoo and Marvin Sackner say they used 15 test subjects and fairly sophisticated medical testing equipment, and found out that chicken soup helps the body fight infection by speeding up expulsion of germ-laden mucus from the nasal passages.

Sackner pointed out that heat is the therapeutic factor, but he said other hot liquids do not seem to be as effective as chicken soup.

"At first, we thought it might be just the vapors," he said. "But chicken soup was significantly better than hot water. How it works I have no idea. It may be taste, medicated or aromatic."

Flowers Need Heat

PARIS (CP) — French oil imports could be cut by 45,000 tons a year if Mother's Day was celebrated two weeks earlier, because less heating oil would be needed to warm greenhouses where the traditional Mother's Day flowers are grown, says a study by a government-financed agency for saving energy.

Bio-dex

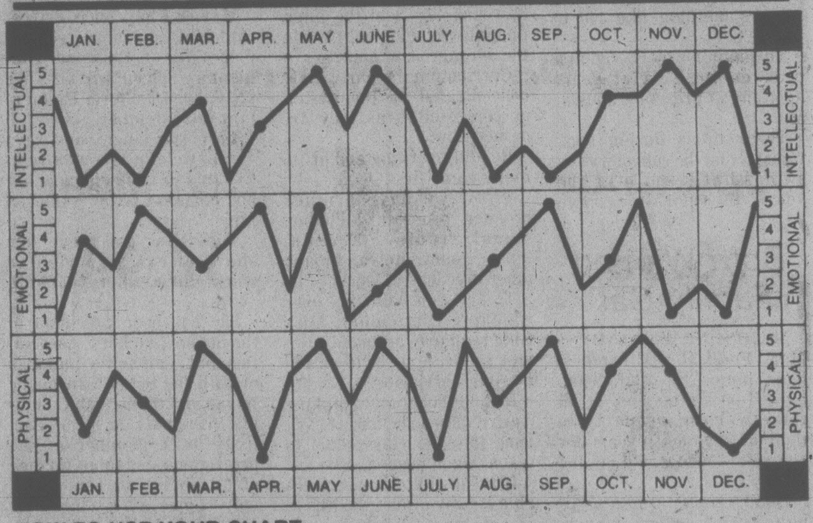
Your computerized biorhythm

© BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Others may be waiting for a chance to make you look bad. Watch out and don't give them cause.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	Don't sell yourself short. Stress your good points and play down your faults.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	Creative ventures are best attempted when your emotions are stable. Check the middle curve.

Depression can hit when your finances seem out of control and your Bio-dex is low. The hard part is setting your dreams in perspective with your bank account. You want to be well-dressed, but every piece of new clothing wreaks havoc with the grocery money and rent. Perhaps you're shopping in a money bracket that's a little beyond your means. Window shop for a while . . . it will give your finances, and your Bio-dex, a chance to recover.

See the Rockies from the Window of a Hostel

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

The Rockies are the pot at the end of Canada's rainbow for most travellers. They certainly were for me when I backpacked my way across the country.

Imagine waking up to some of the world's most spectacular scenery in a mountain hostel that costs just $2.50 a night. I still frequently relive those summer days when I drifted down the Bow River in a canoe. Or the time I came face to face with my first wild bear on a remote road near Jasper.

If you're heading to Banff yourself this summer, here are some of the things to watch for:

The Canadian Hosteling Association will operate at least 15 hostels in Alberta this summer. In Banff National Park you'll find them at Corral Creek, Hilda Creek, Mosquito Creek, Mount Eisenhower, Ramparts Creek and Spray River. In Jasper National Park they're at the Athabasca Falls, Beauty Creek, Maligne Canyon and Mount Edith Cavell. Hostels will also operate at Ribbon Creek, Nordegg, Elk Island National Park and Bragg Creek.

You can join the hosteling association either before you leave or at one of their offices while travelling. Memberships are $6 a year for those under 18 and $12 for people older than that.

You don't have to be a member to stay at one of their hostels, but you will pay 50 cents to $1 more per night if you don't have a membership.

Members also get a handbook that lists the directions and basic information about the hostels mentioned.

These are "permanent" hostels — there are others that open just for the summer.

In Edmonton, the CHA office can help you with information and registration for weekend hostel trips. Weekend hiking and biking and camping trips are arranged by a group called NARRTS.

North West Voyageurs Club organizes weekend canoe trips and the North West Montaineers Club arranges climbing and hiking weekends. The CHA Northwest region office is located at 10922-88th Ave., Edmonton, Alberta, T6G 0Z1.

In the mountain region, the head office for the CHA is located at 455-12th St. N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2N 1Y9. Tel. (403) 283-5551. They can fill you in about climbing weekends and cycle tours run from their hostels.

The CHA is not the only group operating inexpensive accommodation in Alberta. There is a government hostel at Whistler's Mountain and at least five others operated by Hostels Alberta. For $2.50 a night or less, you can stay a maximum of three days within a given two-week period.

The Calgary Youth Hostel is at 520-7th Ave. S.E., Calgary. It's downtown and is open from 5 p.m. till midnight. The Edmonton City Youth Hostel is at 10422-91 Street. This one offers showers, telephones and breakfast.

In Banff, the Mountain Youth Hostel offers you a night's accommodation in tents. Warm clothes are a good idea. When I stayed there in early June, it snowed.

You'll find this hostel 1½ miles from Banff on the road to Lake Minnewanka. Travelling through Medicine Hat, you can stay at the Saamis Youth Hostel. It's located at 6th Ave. and 78th St. If you pass through Grand Prairie, the youth hostel is at the Memorial Arena.

One other alternative for shoestring travellers is the 'Y'. It's a good idea to phone ahead to YMCAs or YWs and make a reservation. With all the events in Alberta this summer, they'll be busy.

In Edmonton, the YMCA is at 1030-102A Ave. and the YWCA at 10305-100 Ave.

In Calgary, the YMCA is at 332-6 Ave. S.W., Calgary and the YWCA at 320-5 Ave. S.E.

If you're planning on camping, contact Travel Alberta and ask for the 1978 Visitors Accommodation Guide. It lists all the campsites and details facilities. You can write ahead for it to their offices in Alberta at 10065 Jasper Ave., 12th Floor, Capitol Sq., Edmonton T5J 0H4.

No matter where you stay there are all sorts of ways to entertain yourself in Alberta this summer. The really big events of course are the Calgary Stampede July 7-16, the Edmonton Klondike Days, July 19 to 29 and, the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, August 3-12.

For smaller events that can be just about as much fun take in: Whoop Up Days in Lethbridge, July 17-23 with a Rodeo on 21-23. In Grande Prairie there are professional chuckwagon races, July 31 to August 2.

The Great Canadian Jet Boat River Race first world championship will be run on the Smokey River, Grand Cache to Peace River, July 21-25, and on the North Saskatchewan River, Nordegg to Edmonton, July 27-31.

Medicine Hat holds its Exhibition and Stampede July 27-29 and, there will be an International Folk Festival in Red Deer, June 24 to July 1. The North American Chuckwagon Championship will be held at High River, August 10-13.

If you want to rent a bike, try Tuxedo Cycle and Sports Ltd. in Calgary, George's Cycle & Sports Shop in Edmonton, The Spoke 'n Edge in Banff or Banff Cycle Rentals (behind the corner drugstore), and the Banff Springs Hotel.

Horses can be rented by the hour from Jasper Park Lodge, Miette Hot Springs and Pyramid Riding Stables at Patricia Lake. In Banff, try Brewster and Martins Stables, as well as the Chateau Lake Louise. When you're in the park, hired horses can only be ridden with an escort guide.

For a really thrilling trip try the Rocky Mountain Raft Tours. In large rubber rafts you travel 15 miles down the Bow River in about three hours. You can purchase a ticket from the Banff Springs Hotel or Jasper Park Lodge. Unfortunately they do not have youth rates, you'll have to pay an adult fare of $12.75.

In the past few years the summer job situation has really changed. It used to be easy to travel out west, see the sights and pick up some summer work. If that's what you have planned this summer, don't bank on it. Take enough money to spend your time travelling.

Even oil rich Alberta has unemployment problems and the major hotels already have hundreds more applications than they need staff. That doesn't mean that the odd job won't come up if you're in the right place at the right time, but don't count on it or you could find yourself hitching home on an empty stomach.

Microwave oven owners can make a simple test to determine if a plate or dish is safe to use in the oven. Add a cup of water to a 2-cup measuring cup. Set it on the plate and put microwave on high for one and a quarter minutes. Remove; if the water is hot and the plate cold, the plate can be used in the oven. If water's cold and plate hot, don't use it. If both plate and water are warm, the plate is safe only for warming foods. Never test a dish with gold or silver trim.

A "finish" for a non-wood kitchen floor covering is a non-wax protective film. A "polish" is usually a protective film that is waterbased and does contain small particles of wax. Don't shake the polish container or you'll shake some of it into foam and your wax job will dry with tiny dried bubbles in the finish. Don't mix floor polish or waxes; one formula could ruin the other.

Most plastic shower curtains and vinyl liners can go into the automatic washer to get rid of mildew and soap scum. Add two or three bath towels to ease the agitation on the plastic. Use hot water and your regular detergent. Only a little bleach will take away some mildew; too much bleach will lighten colored plastic.

* * *

Stains on vinyl seat covers, raincoat, etc., should be removed safely with nothing more than a solution of water, liquid detergent and a little vinegar OR ammonia. Oil or grease stains may require a dry cleaning solvent. But make only two or three strokes with a cloth only slightly damp with the solvent. Repeated rubbing or too much solvent will remove the stiffener in the vinyl and change its appearance.

CFB PETAWAWA TO GET FACELIFT

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Canadian Forces Base Petawawa, about 190 kilometres northwest of Ottawa, will get a $13.6-million facelift this year to expand facilities.

An announcement by Len Hopkins (L—Renfrew North-Nippissing East) and the defence ministry said plans include a new supplies storage building as well as new firing ranges.

Training areas for water crossings, a dual-use helicopter air-to-ground firing range and a battle run for armored fighting vehicles were included.

Base Commander Brig.-Gen. Andrew Christie said the improvements are another step in a larger development program and do not mean the number of personnel at the base will increase.

Kamloops Boom Days Replaced by Stagnation

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The boom days when house prices jumped by $1,000 a month are gone from here.

Kamloops is experiencing the universal malaise of high unemployment now and reduced economic activity — and with it a more stable real estate market as prices increase by $1,000 a year, say real estate spokesmen.

A survey by The Canadian Press discloses the same even-keeled market exists in the Okanagan Valley to the south, where a depressed economy and a continuing high inventory of houses are keeping a lid on prices.

"The market hasn't changed much in the last couple of years," says Ken Cutting, assistant manager of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation office here.

"Our economy is heavily dependent on the construction industry and that tapered off a couple of years ago."

Cutting said that two or three years ago there was a substantial flow of workers from Alberta into this city, many of whom bought houses. But with local unemployment exceeding 10 per cent, that flow might be reversed.

Local resl estate agent Ron Lemke says that the reduced flow shows in sales.

"While the turnover continues to be quite active, the price increases have tapered off," he said. "A homeowner would have a hard time recovering his money one year later with the market as it currently is.

"Large price increases no longer happen like they used to."

Dave Langem, another local agent, says buyers of new homes are largely people who already live elsewhere in the city.

"As a result the inventory of available houses is gradually building up at a rate faster than population growth," he said.

Kamloops is the most dramatic example of the impact of rapid population growth on the real estate market.

During its heavy growth period between 1971 and 1973, construction was booming at Lornex Mines, Gibraltar Mines and nearby dam projects which made Kamloops a central clearing house for workers. The local Weyerhauser pulp mill once employed up to 1,700 men.

The city's population increased by 15 per cent over its total of 46,776 in 1971. That increase tapered off in subsequent years, but its population had swelled to 58,311 by 1976.

Observers say the massive influx sent house prices rocketing at rates as high as $1,000 a month. Some cases still exist, says one real estate agent, citing a $24,000 condominium in a popular suburb that increased $10,000 in the last four years.

But prices appear to have levelled off in the last year, a Kamloops Real Estate Board (KREB) report says. Between March, 1977, and March, 1978, prices for a three-bedroom house rose only about $1,000 to $43,697.

While prices remained steady, the number of houses for sale was up about 25 per cent to 390 in March, 1978, compared with March, 1977.

Sales did not keep pace, however, and in the first three months this year, 131 units were sold, compared with 186 for the first three months of 1977.

A survey of Kelowna, Penticton and Vernon discloses the same minimal price changes between March, 1977, and March, 1978.

In Kelowna, a three-bedroom house sold for $52,077, a drop of $125 from March, 1977. The volume of houses listed in Kelowna with a population of about 50,000 remained high, with 795 houses listed in March, 1978, a slight drop from the 847 units listed in the same month the previous year.

In Penticton, a city of about 21,000 in 1976, house prices increased by $1,600 in the same period to $48,819.

The increase is not considered significant, however. The inventory dropped from 520 units in March, 1977, to 430 units in March, 1978, but for substantial price increases to occur, that stock would have to drop to about 200 units, says a Penticton real estate agent.

In Vernon, a city of about 17,000 in 1976, the average house dropped $2,000 to $50,007 in March, 1978. Sales were up, with 396 units sold of the 1,350 offered in March, 1978, compared with 377 of 1,400 for sale in March, 1977.

Roger Love, a Vernon real estate agent, said unemployment running between 10 and 15 per cent was a primary factor for reduced values. When times are good, as they now are in Calgary, he said, real estate prices just keep climbing.

Also contributing is an increased vacancy rate in rental housing, he said, which gives people a choice of whether to buy or rent.

Gordon Hawkes, a Kelowna agent, said the number of houses listed remains high because of the general economic situation and the energy crunch.

THEY LEFT BEHIND A JAR OF PEPPERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The day after a fire that left his downtown apartment filled with smoke and water, multiple sclerosis victim Ron Telford returned to find a half-empty jar of red peppers outside his blistered door.

It was one of the few items left behind by looters who scoured his apartment for valuables following the blaze early Monday.

His apartment received only smoke and water damage in the fire, but what the fire didn't take, the looters did — his color television set, clothes, kitchen utensils and supplies and a valuable set of knives.

He estimated that replacement value of the goods at about $1,000.

Telford said that besides trying to replace his personal possessions on his meagre handicapped disability pension, he now must start looking for a new home.

The burned-out apartment building — a two-storey frame house containing 15 apartments — is being closed down.

Home hunting is an ordeal, said Telford, because it is difficult for him to get around. He travels by bus, and his illness limits him to walking a total of six blocks a day. As well, the rent must be cheap — about $100 a month — to fit into his limited budget.

He said he wouldn't have minded so much if the fire destroyed the building and its contents.

"It would have been OK if the fire had wiped it out, but to go back and find it all smokey and wet and destroyed and then some creeps have to come and do a rip-off — that's the thing that annoyed me the most," he said.

Student Job Scene 'Not Overly Rosy'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Job placement officers say students will find a slightly improved job market this year but that earlier reports of a 10-per-cent improvement from last year were optimistic.

Susan Thom, of the summer youth employment program, said it is hard for students to find work, but the situation will be marginally better than last year.

Thom said the student employment program, set up by the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, has so far placed 2,489 Vancouver-area students in summer jobs, an increase of 35 per cent from the same period last year.

Thom said 22,000 students from throughout the province will get jobs through the program by the end of the summer, an increase of 1,200 from last year.

She said students can expect the tourist industry to supply more jobs this summer owing to the weakened Canadian dollar, which is expected to attract tourists.

Thom said the bulk of student hiring until now has been from government student work programs.

Last year the program provided 13,500 jobs.

Under the scheme, employers receive up to 50 per cent of a student's wage to a total provincial payment of $2 an hour.

Thom said the program is currently gearing up to help find jobs for high school students who will be finished school at the end of the month.

Until now, the program has been assisting university students who finished final exams in April.

Bob Leitch, of the Simon Fraser University job bureau, said many university students now have found work, particularly senior students and those taking "marketable" courses such as commerce, forestry and engineering.

He said there is still high unemployment among students in first or second year and those in general sciences or liberal arts programs.

Days-Lost Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 406,510 man-days lost owing to lockouts and strikes in March, up substantially from a loss of 278,200 man-days in February, the federal labor department said Thursday.

The March statistics covered 37,590 workers in 148 stoppages, compared with 29,705 workers in 138 stoppages in February.

South African Blacks Blocked from Travelling

By CARYLE MURPHY
Washington Post

JOHANNESBURG — South Africa's policy of setting up independent tribal homelands appears to have made it all but impossible for many blacks to travel abroad.

In two recent cases blacks who both oppose and comply with the government's policy have been blocked from travelling.

Three black nationalists who oppose the policy and refused to apply for citizenship in their homelands were prevented from travelling to the United States and West Germany, because they have no South African passports.

Another black, who complied with the South African policy, obtained a Bophuthatswana passport but was unble to enter Malawi, a neighboring African nation, because it does not recognize the homeland as an independent nation.

The issue of citizenship for the 18 million blacks living in South Africa is one of the major problems stemming from the government's plan to carve up a country that has been administered as one entity since 1910.

The separate development, or "plural-democracy" policy, designed to prevent the country's four million whites from being politically swamped by nonwhites, aims at creating nine independent homelands governed by blacks.

But only 13 per cent of the land — and none of the country's industrial or urban centres — is allocated to the homelands. Several, like Bophuthatswana, are made up of disconnected pieces of land.

The ruling National Party envisages an eventual confederation of the homelands and "white" South Africa, but the plan would leave the white minority in control because most of the land and economic power would be in white hands.

Only two homelands — Transkei and Bophuthatswana — have become independent so far, and no other nation has recognized them.

Many blacks, especially those living in urban areas, resent being told they are not citizens of South Africa, where they were born, educated and where they work. Most say they have never been to their "homelands" and do not wish to go.

About two million blacks — members of the Tswana and Xhosa tribes — live outside the homelands of Transkei and Bophuthatswana that have been reserved for them.

The dilemma was highlighted last week when a university professor who speaks Xhosa, Wilkie Khambule, and a man who speaks Tswana, Nthato Motlana, were invited to West Germany for a conference. When they applied for South African passports, they were told to get travel documents from their homeland governments.

The two men, both leaders of the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg, refused to apply for the homeland documents, because it would imply recognition of the homelands' independence.

Khambule echoed this sentiment: "In the past two weeks I have tried three times to get a passport, but every time I am told to provide proof of my homeland affiliation with a certificate saying where my father was born . . . I have suffered much humiliation trying to obtain a passport and want nothing to do with the homelands."

Sipho Sepamla, a poet who won a national award last year for his creative writing, had the same problem when he was invited to visit the United States as a guest of the American Publishers Association.

On the other hand, Emily Banda, 50, a servant who had saved money five years for the first vacation trip and first plane ride, was prevented from going abroad when Malawi would not accept her travel papers from Bophuthatswana.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is presented in the form of a bridge mystery. You are informed that South misplayed his game contract. Can you find South's error?

Both sides vulnerable.
West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

After winning trick one with his diamond king, West continued with the diamond ace. Then came a third diamond, which South ruffed.

South next played the king of trumps, which was taken by East's ace. East returned a trump, dummy's queen taking the trick. A third trump lead to South's jack picked up East's remaining trump.

The six of clubs was then led to dummy's ace, and a club was returned, with South finessing his jack. West's queen now took the setting trick. What was South's error?

East had passed West's opening bid — and East had been revealed as the possessor of the ace of hearts. Surely if East held the club queen, giving him 6 points, he would have made some response to West's opening bid. So East couldn't have the club queen. South's finesse in clubs, as he took it, just had to lose.

Declarer should have taken the "backward" finesse in clubs, on the assumption that West was known to possess the club queen. After trumps were drawn, South should have laid down the jack of clubs. If West did not cover with the queen, South's jack would win the trick. But West undoubtedly would have put up the queen (cover an honor with an honor) and dummy's ace would have taken the trick.

The nine of clubs would be led next, East would play low, as would South, finessing against East's hoped-for ten. As is evident, the finesse would have won.

Of course South had to have a little bit of luck on his side to play the hand correctly: East had to possess the tens of clubs for South to avoid losing a club trick. But to have finessed the jack, as South did, offered no hope. The finesse against the ten-spot offered a 50-50 chance.

Public Issue Slated

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. will likely make its first public issue of shares early this fall after making final its capital structure with the provincial government, president David Helliwell said.

"If we are successful in attaining a favorable capitalization of the government's equity, I believe it will be possible to go to the public for up to $100 million of share capital," he said in an address this week to the annual meeting of the Vancouver Society of Financial Analysts.

The provincial government is the sole shareholder in the corporation, formed earlier this year to take over the government's holdings in Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., Plateau Mills Ltd. and Kootenay Forest Products Ltd.

The corporation also controls petroleum and natural gas rights on 2.3 million acres in northeastern B.C.

Helliwell said it would be preferable to offer a non-dividend-paying common stock to the public, "but it might not be practical to offer shares that do not provide some dividend income to investors."

The government has indicated it would retain less than 50 per cent of the corporation's equity after the initial public issue.

Charges Laid

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Richard King, president of Local 9-817 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, has been charged with trespass and public mischief against British Columbia Railway, following an incident in early May during a strike at the Husky Oil Co.

Mower-Scalp Surgery Success

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — A seven-hour operation on a 7-year-old girl who was scalped by a lawn mower was successful, hospital officials said.

Katherine Denise Evans was in guarded condition Thursday at Schumpert Memorial Hospital.

She and her brother were playing near the lawn mower Wednesday when she fell and her hair became tangled in the mower's rear axle. The power of the blades tore a large portion of the left side of her scalp away.

Surgeons worked to reimplant the hair and flesh.

An ambulance driver was sent to the girl's home in nearby Bossier City to recover the hair and scalp.

Dr. John K. Graham, a cosmetic consultant and plastic surgeon at the hospital, performed the operation. Graham last year successfully reimplanted the arm of a boy from Hornbeck, La., who lost it in a train accident.

Projects Intrigue Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet engineers are developing novel schemes to utilize tethered balloons on construction projects, in forestry and for rapid erection of elevated cableways across the vast stretches of Siberia.

Many of the schemes are still on the drawing boards, but the engineers say they are enthusiastic about the future prospects of exploiting various types of lighter-than-air craft.

The newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda recently published an artist's conception depicting a mammoth, dual-hulled cigar-shaped airship hovering low over the ground as it lifts prefabricated concrete sections into place atop an apartment building.

Soviet specialists believe such "floating cranes" — manoeuvred by cables anchored to the earth — would help reduce construction costs, particularly for heavy structures such as blast furnaces and atomic reactors, the article said.

It reported that a small experimental model with a one-ton lifting capacity has already been tested during construction of a nitrogen fertilizer plant in Dorogobuzh, a town about 235 miles west of Moscow.

The most ambitious scheme would call for transporting cargoes across rough terrain by means of gondolas suspended from a cableway held up in the air by tethered balloons.

Moskovskaya Pravda noted that work along the new Baikal-Amur railway, slated to stretch 2,202 miles across Siberia to the Soviet Far East, had repeatedly been plagued by massive jam-ups of construction equipment and supplies which cannot be moved promptly to job sites because of nearly impassable swamps, forests and mountains.

But if helicopter-borne crews were to set up a balloon cableway bypassing such natural obstacles overhead, the story said, "then in the course of only a few hours bulldozers, excavators, machine tools, prefabricated sections of buildings and building materials would go directly to their destination points."

The cargo capacity of such a cableway could be significantly boosted by suspending underneath each balloon along the route a metal-frame strut shaped like the Greek letter and mathematical symbol pi.

When a cargo-laden gondola approached, its weight would push the legs of each strut down into the ground and thus help support the cableway until after the car had passed. If the route headed across a river the strut legs could be fitted out with special pontoons.

Another Soviet newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, said engineers from a Moscow forestry institute were experimenting with use of balloons to transport cut trees out of dense forests without having to build logging roads.

Soviet specialists said they believed that such a method could reduce by more than half the cost of carrying timber to sawmills, as well as help limit ecological damage to surrounding forest areas.

A scientist from the institute, Prof. V.M. Pikalkin, said foresters were also starting to use balloons to pluck choice seed cones from the tops of tall trees in pine forests in order to speed reforestation efforts.

Lavender Harvest Popular

A pleasant garden job for a sunny day is the gathering of lavender flower spikes for drying. When neatly packaged, the dried product is sure to find eager customers at fall bazaars.

Summer visitors from anywhere east of the Rockies seem to find dried lavender irresistable, too. They love to see it growing and to be given the stems of flowers to take home. It needs no preparation for this purpose.

When cutting for drying even a few dozen stems, choose a sunny day around noon — not because of magic in the hour, but because overnight condensation on the flower buds must have a chance to dry completely.

The day to choose is one when the lowest flower bud on the lavender spikes are seen to be opened. At that time the oil (which contains the perfume) is at its highest concentration in the buds.

There have been people who say that they did hot know lavender has flowers. Well, those little purple knobs on the spikes above the grey of the lavender plant foliage are flower buds. They open from the bottom one upwards. Each blossom is mauve-colored when open.

Take time to look at a few; they are as interesting as other flowers. The bees love them when opened, however, the perfume is greatly lessened by that time.

Older readers may remember "lavender sticks" back at the beginning of the century. They were fashioned from freshly gathered lavender spikes.

Narrow ribbon, usually of green, yellow, or mauve, was entwined between each stem and the next as 12 or 15 stems were expertly wrapped together. The stems were made rigid by intertwining the ribbon for two or three inches of stem.

Lavender sticks were kept in a pottery jar on the living room mantelpiece where the warmth from the fire brought out a faint perfume.

As a special treat, we would break off a few stems to throw on the glowing coals where the aroma would be released enough to scent the air quite pleasantly. As a deodorizer, lavender still has the modern pressure-can beaten all ways.

To store the fragrant little flower buds of lavender to make sachets later — and for adding to summer potpourris — the cut stems of buds are spread to dry on sheets of brown paper (bags opened out flat) and left on a table where they won't be disturbed for a few days. When dry, the buds are easily pushed off the stems with the fingers.

Drying needs air movement and warmth but not sun. According to conditions in your house, the drying may take 48 hours or it may be more.

It may be convenient to place bunches of stems fastened with an elastic band (or wire tie) heads-down in brown paper bags. Leave the bags open and suspend them from a high spot in a warm room, not in sunshine. Clothes pins fastening the bags to a curtain rod up high will get the most warmth.

Shedding the buds from the dried stems is a pleasant job; you need to wear rubber or plastic gloves, if allergic to high concentrations of aromatic oils on the skin.

Gathered at the right time, dried under perfect conditions, I have known lavender to keep its aroma for as long as 10 years.

Rent to own a possibility. No better way to get strted toward ownership. Also have half-acre level lot suitable for mobile home. HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate

SLEGG — In cherished and loving memory of our beloved son, and brother, Gregory Dorian, June 16, 1973.
There is a garden in our hearts,
Where happy memories grow,
Of those who mean the most to us,
As seasons come and go.
And, among the fairest flowers,
And the loveliest, by there,
Are the thoughts we'll always cherish,
Of how very dear you are.
— Deeply loved, sadly missed, and remembered with pride.
Forever in our hearts son.
Mom, Dad, and Maura.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

TRAVEL WATCHDOGS NAMED BY MAIR

Members of the Travel Assurance Board, set up under the new Travel Agents Registration Act, were named Thursday by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

Gustav Kroll, a Vancouver lawyer, was named chairman of the board, which will consider claims for consumers who failed to receive travel services for which they pre-paid, or who were obliged by circumstances to pay twice for services received.

Other members of the board are: Jean Douglas, a Vancouver consumer advocate; Malcolm Nicholson, a Vancouver travel agency owner; David Hardouin, a Burnaby travel industry executive; Gerrard Manning, a Vancouver airline official, and civil servants Allan Gould and Bruce McCulloch.

Tragedy School Head Claims Parent Support

TORONTO (CP) — A school headmaster gave an angry retort today to reports that instructors of St. John's School of Ontario, in Claremont, were inexperienced and started out Sunday in a violent storm.

Frank Felleti said at a memorial service for the 12 students, aged 12 to 14, and an instructor, who drowned in Lake Timiskaming when their canoes capsized, that he has received nothing but support from the families of the victims.

Toronto Mayor David Crombie was among about 450 people who attended the memorial service in St. Martin-in-the-Fields Anglican Church in west Toronto, a church which all of the dead students regularly had attended.

Felleti said he was supervising a trip in the Wawa, Ont., area with about 20 older boys from the school on Monday when he learned of the accident in the northwestern Quebec lake.

When he arrived in Ville Marie, Que., he first met the parents of Barrie Nelson who told Felleti: "Don't stop what you're doing. Don't let this tragedy stop your work. If you do our son died for nothing."

The 15 boys who survived Sunday's disaster practised hymns in the church basement before the service began.

They sang a tribute during the service.

Boys from St. John's schools in Selkirk, Man., and the Edmonton area formed a honor guard on a path leading into the church.

About 350 people filled the church and about 100 stood outside listening to a loudspeaker broadcasting the service.

The three St. John's schools, private boys' schools, are administered by the Company of the Cross, a lay order of the Anglican Church.

$20,000 Suite Fire Blamed on Smoking

About $20,000 damage was done when fire broke out on the fourth-floor of the Spring Ridge Apartments, 1235 Balmoral, Thursday.

The fire, reported at 10:15 a.m. started in a bedroom in Suite 406 occupied by George Becker.

Becker was out at the time.

The fire, which officials believe was started by careless smoking, was confined to the room but there was extensive smoke damage to the third and fourth floors of the 18-suite building.

In other fires, combustibles piled near to an incinerator caught fire at about 6:30 p.m. damaging a shed at 424 Langford owned by Keith Marquand.

As firemen were mopping up they found in the shed a smoke ejector that went missing from the fire department about two years ago.

Deputy chief Mike Belton described Marquand as something of a junk dealer and said Marquand wasn't sure where he had picked up the ejector valued at between $400 to $500.

No charges are contemplated.

And shortly before 9:30 p.m. a B.C. Forest Products boom boat and Seaspan tug Island Rocket picked up two juveniles following a grass fire on Halkett Island, a small islet in the Inner Harbor.

The two boys were turned over to police for questioning and later released.

The fire caused no damage.

DIPLOMAT DRUGGED IN ESCAPE DRAMA

WEST BERLIN (Reuter) — Two East Germans drugged a Belgian diplomat and stole his car and diplomatic pass to escape to West Berlin on Wednesday, informed sources said today.

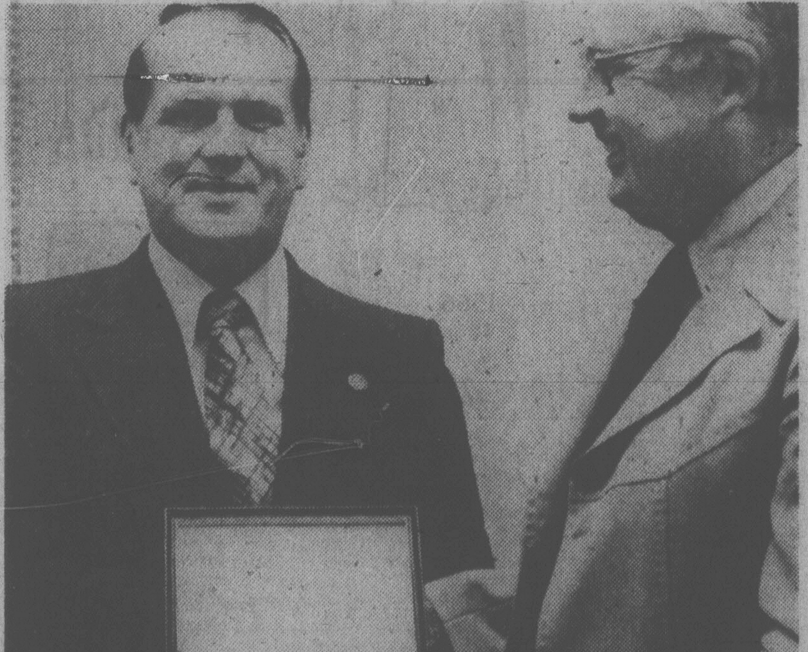
They said Roland Stevens, consular attache in the East Berlin embassy, was drugged by the two men — apparently friends who knew him and his apartment well — Wednesday morning.

The men then took his car with its red diplomatic plates, inserted a new picture in his pass and bluffed their way past guards at the Checkpoint Charlie crossing to West Berlin.

One of them apparently hid under a seat or in the trunk, the sources said.

The sources said Stevens had been visiting a restaurant with the two men before returning home. He regained consciousness Wednesday evening locked in a room of his East Berlin apartment.

In East Berlin, the Belgian embassy refused comment, and a spokesman for the government in West Berlin declined to identify the two East Germans involved.



HIGHEST AWARD a commanding officer can give one of his men is presented to Cpl. Jack Hest, left, of RCMP detachment in Kelowna, for outstanding work in developing crime prevention and community relations programs in the province. Chief Superintendent Don Cliffe, officer in charge of the RCMP division 2 in B.C., made the presentation at a meeting of the crime prevention committee of the B.C. Police Commission in Victoria Thursday. It's the first time in Canada the award has been given for work in crime prevention.

Industry Support Hunted

The mandate of the newly-formed B.C. Systems Corp. not only ensures, but also requires, that it will co-operate with the data-processing industry, corporation president Donald Alexander said Thursday.

Alexander told the Pacific Northwest Computer Conference the corporation needs the support of industry and universities in fulfilling a huge educational requirement.

He said this need for education is one of the expected problems involved in centralizing the provincial government's data processing operations. Another problem is facing the pent-up demand for the corporation's services.

49 New Forest Fires

Forty-nine new forest fires broke out in B.C. this week, the ministry of forests said Thursday in its weekly report.

The ministry said that 41 fires are still burning but cool, showery weather brought relief to most parts of B.C.

There have been 406 fires so far this year, compared with 429 for the same period last year, the ministry said.

Orlov Jailed 'for Crimes'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says in a commentary by the official Tass news agency that dissident Yuri Orlov was sentenced to a labor camp for anti-Soviet crimes, not his opinions.

The lengthy commentary, the first by the Soviet media since Orlov's was sentenced to 12 years hard labor and internal exile, coincided with reports that jailed dissident Alexander Ginzburg may go on trial soon.

Orlov founded Moscow's Helsinki group in May, 1976, to monitor the Soviet Union's compliance with human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords on East-West co-operation. Orlov and Ginzburg, a member of the group, were charged with anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

The commentary contended that Orlov had been in contact with subversive anti-Soviet organizations in the West for years.

Saanich Police Propose Site For Dog Unit

After nine years without one, Saanich police department would like to have its own police dog unit again and it has a suitable site lined up for the kennels.

Inspector Ted Owens told the Saanich police board Thursday the former Elk Lake firehall would provide an excellent base for the canine support service, at minimal cost.

The department has not had a dog unit since 1969.

Board members were told that four officers should be trained as dog handlers, and a run and kennel would be needed at each officer's home in addition to those at the converted firehall.

Training could be undertaken locally, or by using facilities in Alberta or Vancouver.

The B.C. Police Commission has agreed to provide $10,000 for a dog training program in the municipality. But Mayor Mel Couvelier, the Saanich police board chairman, suggested a decision on the dog unit be deferred until a task force report on policing costs in B.C. is completed.

Owens said the firehall would also be suitable for a pilot project of establishing neighborhood police offices in Saanich.

Security Attitude Upsets Couvelier

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier Thursday criticized the B.C. Police Commission for what he termed its inaction and lack of interest in the problem of police radio security.

Concerned about illegal monitoring of Saanich police radio frequencies, the Saanich police board recently requested the provincial police commission to undertake a thorough study.

But the commission has suggested that as the use of monitoring equipment is covered under a federal act, the matter be referred to the B.C. Police Chiefs Association.

Couvelier, the police board chairman, told board members he was astounded at the commission's reluctance to get involved in the issue, especially considering its active role in other facets of police work in the last two years.

He said referring the problem to the police chiefs association would be time-consuming and a solution might not result for at least two years.

The board agreed to ask the commission to take a stronger stand.

'All Not Well In Solitary'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conditions in solitary confinement sections of Canadian penetentiaries have deteriorated rather than improved in recent years, says a report released Thursday.

"Amenities are fewer and contact between one human being and another has been reduced to a minimum in some institutions," former Corrections Investigator Inger Hansen said in her fourth annual report.

The report covers 1,353 prisoner complaints handled from June, 1976, to May, 1977. Miss Hansen was replaced by Ronald Stewart last fall after she was appointed privacy commissioner with the Canadian Human Rights Commission.

She also criticized the penetentiary service for automatically placing in segregation all those whose death sentences were commuted when capital punishment was abolished in 1976.

She recommended that convicted murders be assessed individually to determine whether solitary confinement is necessary.

The penetentiary service should also abolish punishment by diet, she said.

Deficiencies of bulk and vitamin C in the otherwise nutritous punishment diet could result in constipation and physical deterioration, nutrition experts said.

Hansen also criticized inconsistencies in the Parole Act which could force a prisoner, under certain circumstances, to serve parts of his sentence twice.

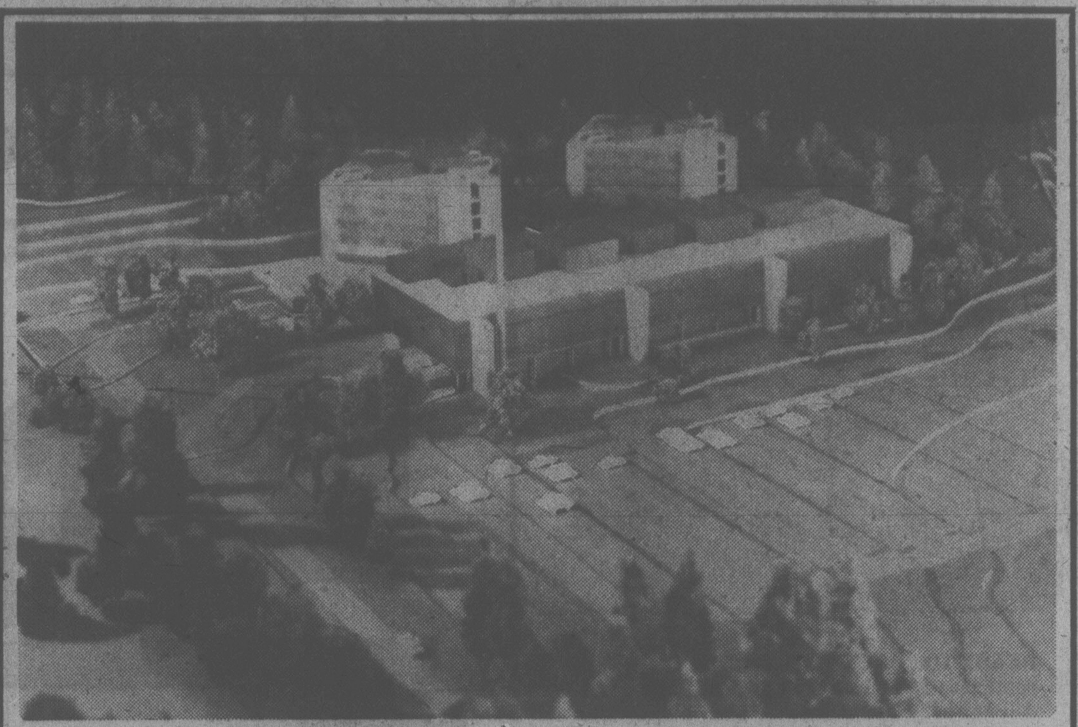
Alarm Sounds Again To Save Spit



ARCHITECT'S MODEL shows what new $45 million Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road will look like. Four-storey building in front will house diagnostic and treatment facilities while two towers behind will hold hospital's 469 beds. Construction is expected to begin in August with completion in 1981.

Sooke Harbor's lucrative fishing industry is hanging in by a finger.

And that finger is endangered by erosion, Capital Region Board members were reminded this week at a Sooke public meeting.

Whiffen Spit, the 4,000-foot finger of land which makes Sooke's the most protected harbor on southwestern Vancouver Island, is being washed away, and urgent action is imperative, the meeting was told.

Ray Nestman, president of the Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce, said if bureaucratic waffling continues much longer the spit could disintegrate, causing major damage to the harbor and the community which depends on it for its livelihood.

"We cannot keep our finger in the dike much longer," he warned.

Nestman recalled that a study of the Whiffen Spit erosion problem was completed for the provincial ministry of lands, forests and water resources in late 1976, and a copy delivered to the regional board.

"It has sat on many a desk, been shuffled, discussed, debated and brought to the public's attention," he said.

"Briefs have been made to the cabinet, the minister has seen the problem first-hand. The result — a big, fat zero."

BCCA Seeking Delay Of Heroin Legislation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Corrections Association (BCCA) asked the provincial government Thursday to delay passage of parts of its proposed compulsory heroin treatment legislation until other voluntary programs can be examined.

The association said in a telegram to Premier Bill Bennett that the heroin treatment program, without its compulsory aspects, could provide treatment options that are needed but never provided before.

It added, however, that passage of the bill in its present form will result in legal challenges to the legislation and create a controversy that will polarize both the public and health professionals.

"The resulting atmosphere of distrust would ensure that there would be few who would voluntarily enter the program and the opportunity to provide meaningful voluntary programs would be lost," the BCCA said.

The association, composed of persons involved in the criminal justice and corrections systems, said drug dependency should be treated as a health and social problem rather than one dealt with by imposing criminal sanctions.

It said those addicts who would benfit from a program aimed at eliminating their heroin dependency would volunteer to take part in such a program. The private sector should also become involved, said the BCCA, so that a variety of approaches can be ensured.

Ferry Boss Leaving Post

Ken Stratford, 41, B.C. Ferries' traffic manager, is leaving at the end of July to form his own marketing consultant company, catering primarily to the travel industry.

A native Victorian, Stratford will operate in Victoria and says there is "an enormous potential" for the travel industry in British Columbia, particularly on Vancouver Island.

Stratford has been in the travel industry for 22 years, first with B.C. Central Airways, operating out of Kamloops. He spent five years in Europe, working for British United Airlines and Japan Airline.

In 1965 he returned to Canada to work for B.C. Airlines out of Port Hardy and later worked out of Prince Rupert as the airline's regional manager.

He joined B.C. Ferries 11 years ago as ticket agent, was director of information for eight years and moved to Victoria 2½ years ago.

Pedestrian In Poor Shape After Accident

A 64-year-old pedestrian is in critical condition in Victoria General Hospital with injuries he received when struck by a car at Cloverdale and Oak Wednesday night.

Saanich police said Jospeh Stephen Gillings, 395 St. Charles, broke both his legs, his hip, some ribs and injured his head in the mishap which occurred shortly after 11 p.m.

Police said the car was driven by Peggie Benn, 1051 Tulip Avenue.

Region Buys Admin HQ

The Capital Region Board has ignored the advice of Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and reaffirmed an earlier decision to buy an administrative building at 524 Yates for $737,000.

Curtis had sent a letter suggesting regional directors defer a decision to embark on "any new major capital expenditure in the area of administration" until the provincial government's regional government review committee has completed its report.

Board members were left to speculate on whether the minister was hinting that the scope of the districts' administrative responsibilities might be curtailed in future legislation.

In any case, they decided this week to by-pass Curtis' request and go ahead with the purchase of the three-storey heritage building, which the district now rents at 524 Yates from the Victoria Environmental Enhancement Foundation.

Board chairman Jim Campbell pointed out, in a reply to Curtis, that the earlier decision to buy was unanimous, after comparing renting and owning costs.

He also noted that on the strength of the purchase agreement, the private foundation has committed itself to buy a half-acre waterfront property on Wharf Street for $400,000 and donate it as a public park.

BARGAIN FLIGHT OVERBOOKED

BOSTON (AP) — Unlucky travellers lounged again on the terminal floor at Logan International Airport today, hoping to board the second Pan Am no-frills flight from Boston to Amsterdam.

"I took a chance coming late," said Roland Karlman, a Swedish missionary to Nigeria who was the first person bumped from Thursday's maiden flight to Amsterdam. "But I'm taking it philosophically," Karlman said.

The no-frills flight carried 144 passengers. Early arrivals had shown up 24 hours before with air mattresses and even a portable television to wait for the first of the cheapest U.S.-to-Europe flights ever.

About 68 persons missed Thursday's flight, including some who had waited since Wednesday. Bill Cowden, Pan Am's regional managing director, said some people were turned away because New York had offered tickets and boarding passes.

Eight boarding passes were distributed in New York before Pan Am became confident that there would be enough people in Boston to fill the flight. The passes were honored as if they were reservations, meaning that 136 of the 144 seats went to those in line in Boston.

"We had no idea the turnout would be like this," said Cowden, "so we got New York to sell some to keep it from turning into a bath."

READY TO PLAY BALL Saturday against local politicians and media stalwarts is Dianne Weddell and her team of workers from the Victoria Youth Employment Office. The game at 11 a.m. at Beacon Hill Park diamond is the first event of Hire-a-Student Week, organized by the employment office. The job-finding centre at 2653 Douglas expects a flood of students next week with city high schools closing for the term today.

Solons Deny Conspiracy

WASHINGTON (WP) — Chase Manhattan Bank President David Rockefeller has rejected as "totally false" charges that the Trilateral Commission has "undue influence" on the governments in North America, Europe and Japan.

The commission, founded in 1973 at Rockefeller's suggestion to promote closer co-operation among the three regions on international issues, has been meeting here since Sunday. The basic theme it promotes is the "interdependence" of the non-Communist world.

Rockefeller is one of three co-chairmen, the others being Georges Berthoin for Europe and Takeshi Watanabe for Japan.

The 250 members are drawn from the private sector "establishments" of the three areas. (B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner became a member when he was a vice-president of McMillan Bloedel) and since its inception many of the Trilateralists have moved into high government positions.

When President Carter, himself a Trilateralist, drew on the commission for at least a half-dozen top appointments, including Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, it fed the charge that the commission was a "conspirary" to influence government decision-making on its own behalf.

Rockefeller, Berthoin and Watanabe held a press conference at the conclusion of the meeting Wednesday to help dispel any mystery about the commission, Rockefeller said. They also discussed briefly reports on energy and labor-management trends that had been made available earlier.

"One doesn't like to feel that people have a totally false impression of an organization one is associated with," Rockefeller said in response to a question about the commission's image. "There have been a number of publications from the right and left that have made these charges (about undue influence). They are without foundation, and I'm afraid most of the criticism is based on ignorance of the facts, and that's why we are trying to explain the facts, and that's one reason for this press conference today."

Berthoin interjected that "if the image was the reality, most of the European members, including myself, would not like to be members." Rockefeller added: "That goes for all of us."

Part of the criticism leveled against the Trilateral Commission relates to the closed-door nature of most of the meetings. At this session, however, the commission staff produced many of the papers and speeches in advance and arranged a press conference on the opening day with two of the three keynoters.

Support Dodgers Hounded

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York state is attempting to recover $23 million owed by 5,000 parents receiving child support while on public assistance and has hired the U.S. Internal Revenue Service (IRS) to collect it.

Almost all of the debtors are men who have defaulted on payments for families on welfare, 4,000 of whom live in New York City, said Stephen Morello, a spokesman for the state department of social services.

Food Firm TV Gifts Detailed

Airline and football tickets and color television sets are some of the gifts food distributors offer store clerks to make sure their products get good display on supermarket shelves.

Wholesalers who don't play the game can find the stocking clerks have placed their products in a poor location, or have turned all the labels French side out — two moves that are guaranteed to hurt sales, Len Bawtree, chairman of the agriculture committee investigating the industry, said today.

The Socred MLA for Shuswap said such incidents probably have no effect on the cost of the product to the consumer, but can hurt B.C. producers if U.S. distributors are more willing to offer gifts.

And this is when some action should be taken, Bawtree said.

But the incidents are difficult to prove. And there is no evidence at all of any corporate policy that would allow such incidents to take place.

In fact, the major food chains frown on the practice and there have been cases where store clerks have been fired for accepting gifts, Bawtree said.

The Rebates and Allowances Report investigating the food chain from the farmer to the supermarket was tabled in the legislature today.

Researchers say that if the industry really wants to stop the practice of gift-giving, retailers should deal with several different distributors and threaten to de-list products by any wholesaler found to be offering gifts.

The lengthy report details the way the food marketing system works.

"As far as we can figure out, it seems to be working very well," Bawtree said.

BEEF PRICE CHECK SET BY AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board will be asked to take a special look at the retailing and processing sector of the beef industry to make certain there has been no excessive profit-taking in recent weeks as prices have soared, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said today.

Chretien told the Commons he would ask board chairman Harold Renouf to make an immediate study of the situation and to issue a preliminary report as soon as possible.

Chretien made the announcement in response to questioning from Liberal MP Paul McRae (Fort William) who asked if the board could make a speedy investigation into allegations of profiteering by retailers and processors.

Beef prices were a major contributor to the rapid increase in the consumer price index, the most widely used measure of inflation, announced earlier this week.

Zaire Regrets It's Unable To Hire Today

OTTAWA (CP) — The Zairian Embassy appealed to Canadians Thursday to stop telephoning about job opportunities for foreign mercenaries in Zaire's armed forces.

Ndagano Bulumba, first counsellor in the embassy, said in a statement evil forces are spreading the false rumor that Zaire is recruiting mercenaries.

These evil forces had ravaged Zaire, he said, apparently referring to the recent invasion of southern Zaire by Katangan rebels.

Bulumba denied "energetically and categorically" that Zaire is seeking foreign mercenaries and urged potential Canadian soldiers of fortune to stop bothering the embassy with telephone calls.

Welfare Cases Bound for North

Hound Dog
I ♥ MAILMEN

CANINE COUTURE has arrived in Victoria, in the form of the Doggy T-shirt, modelled here by Mac with the help of Rick Farrington, manager of the T-Shirt Emporium in the Hillside shopping centre. They all bear appropriate slogans, and there's even one to reassure nervous letter carriers: "I love mailmen." With the doggy T-shirt already here, can dog pants for panting dogs be far behind? In houndstooth check, naturally. (John McKay photo).

Thousands of welfare recipients will be encouraged — and forced if necessary — to leave Vancouver in a new plan to keep them from a life of drugs, liquor and prostitution, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

He said four possibilities are being considered:

— Free shelter and food facilities outside Vancouver to encourage recipients to move.

— Financial aid towards moving costs.

— A "repatriation" counselling scheme to help recipients and their families enjoy productive lives.

— Cancellation of welfare for those who refuse to move.

Vander Zalm said the concept, first raised by his ministry staff in Vancouver, is being discussed at the managerial level.

Once all staff recommendations are in, a co-ordinated policy will be formulated and regulations will be introduced or amended, he said.

Victoria does not have the same problem so no similar action is being considered here, Vander Zalm said today.

He said there is no danger of Victoria picking up Vancouver's problem when the welfare people are forced to leave the Lower Mainland.

He said the ministry will put all its efforts into directing them away from any urban area into the northern rural areas.

The ministry just won't let it happen, he said.

"I think we've learned from the Vancouver situation where the concentration of services tends to lock the problems in."

Those offices won't be concentrated in one area again, he said.

The minister said he wants to resolve the problem before this fall because downtown Vancouver is in an emergency situation.

NDP human resources critic Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) said Vander Zalm's plan is a "violation of democratic principles which makes scapegoats of the poor."

She called the threat of loss of welfare benefits inhuman and degrading. She said it was only a year ago that Vander Zalm had forbidden welfare recipients from living in rural areas.

Vander Zalm said the downtown crisis has been caused mainly by a flood of thousands of people into Vancouver, most of them native Indians from northern communities.

"They're being attracted here by the bright lights and excitement," he said.

"Troubles arise because these people have few skills, abilities or qualifications for getting employment. They end up walking from beer parlor to beer parlor and from pool hall to pool hall and getting into trouble."

He said in the past the government has tried to solve the problem by providing hostels, food kitchens and drop-

AIB's Raise Vetoed

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases of 11.5 per cent for anti-inflation board employees would be unacceptable to the government, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said today, adding that the board's chairman, Harold Renouf, has denied the raises will be that large.

Renouf, who was not available for immediate comment, requested Parliament Thursday for funds totalling $12.5 million in the current fiscal year for the board's staff.

That is an increase of $479,000 for the last year in spite of a reduction in the number of jobs to 635 from 680.

In the Commons, Chretien said Renouf denies he is asking for increases above those allowed other Canadian workers. Most workers now under the anti-inflation program are restricted to pay raises of a maximum six per cent in 1978.

Harold Renouf told the Commons finance committee Thursday that he has asked the government for an additional $479,000 in salaries and wages this year, bringing the board's total payroll to $12.5 million.

Yet the anticipated number of jobs at the board would drop to 635 from 680, he said.

Calculation shows the average board salary would rise by more than 11.5 per cent — almost twice the six-per-cent standard set by the board for other wage settlements this year — to $19,685 from $17,617.

Renouf said the increases are needed to cover higher civil service union contracts, annual raises, promotions and benefits.

The anti-inflation board was formally replaced Thursday by another government monitoring agency run by the Economic Council of Canada.

Two Held In Killing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police were holding two men Thursday after the shooting death of a man during a holdup at a city store.

Erik Armand Desmet, 25, of no known address, was gunned down by one of the holdup men late Wednesday night at the Mac's convenience store on Denman Street in the West End.

They said two suspects were arrested at separate city locations Thursday.

Police said Desmet walked into the store, directly beside Dillinger's Cabaret, about 11:30 p.m. while the holdup was in progress. Three customers and the manager had been ordered to the back of the store.

HUSKY BIDDING TO BE PROBED

OTTAWA (CP) — The justice department has been asked for an opinion on New Democratic Party charges there may have been collusion between two United States companies to drive up the value of shares in Husky Oil Ltd.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said in an interview he has written a letter to the government law officers "seeking the broadest possible advice" on the question of collusion.

Earlier in the Commons, Douglas said a "game of stock market badminton" between Husky of Cody, Wy., and Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles had driven up the value of Husky stock by $200 million.

Meanwhile, it was reported that North American stock exchanges are investigating the takeover bids of Husky Oil Ltd. of Calgary by Petro-Canada and Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles.

Within hours of each other Thursday, both competitors — Petro-Canada and Occidental — raised their bids for Husky.

Harold Gibson, director of market operations for the Toronto Stock Exchange, said the exchange has written to brokers requesting information on their clients who were buying and selling Husky stock.

Gibson said the examination so far has been limited to last week's trading activity when the takeover bid was first revealed to the public.

Speculation was that inside information was leaked to some stock buyers.

Post Office Strike Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — It now seems apparent that inside postal workers will have to go on strike to win their contract dispute with the post office, Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), said Thursday.

Parrot said at a news conference the post office is conducting a witch-hunt against Toronto employees who publicly criticized post office management.

All employees who were quoted in a front-page Toronto Star article which appeared May 27 have been subpoenaed to appear before a special inquiry into allegations of vandalism and waste in the post office.

Parrot said the post office is deliberately harassing employees at a time when the union is attempting to resolve its contract dispute through conciliation.

The union will not be in a legal strike position until after the three-member conciliation commission has issued its report. Conciliation hearings are to continue at least until the end of this month.

Free Shuttle Bus Starts Run July 1

A free shuttle bus for downtown shoppers will get a trial run this summer, Victoria city council's economic development committee decided Thursday.

Two buses will operate in and around the city shopping core starting July 1 — if the buses are a success they will become a year-round feature.

Committee chairman Ald. Bill Tindall said the bus service will be reviewed after its first few weeks and discontinued if it's not worthwhile.

But as long as people are using it, he said, it should be continued.

It will cost an estimated $46,800 to run the buses until January — a full year's operation would cost roughly $72,000.

Tindall said the shuttle bus system, first tried out in the city last year during the Christmas season, could help revitalize the city.

He said downtown businesses support the concept.

Ald. Murray Glazier expressed some doubts about the shuttle system.

"I was not impressed by the shuttle bus at Christmas time," he said "It just didn't work."

Tindall replied that Glazier's statement was opinion only. He said 500 people a day used the buses last year "and I thought that was a good average."

Glazier later voted to support the shuttle bus on a month-to-month basis.

He said the program would have to be re-examined at the end of July.

The buses will operate from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day, running in a clockwise direction on the rectangle of the streets formed by Douglas, Humboldt, Government and Fisgard.

The buses would also make three round trips daily to any cruise ships docked in the area.

IWA OUT UP-ISLAND

COURTENAY (CP) — About 175 members of the International Woodworkers of America walked off the job today, shutting down the Crown Zerllerbach Canada Ltd. logging operation.

Union spokesman Rudy Van der Brink said the main issue in the dispute is job security and the use of non-union contract labor. No meeting with the company has been set up, he said.

Legalize Heroin . . . Junkie's Dying Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 46-year-old heroin addict who killed himself last week wrote in a suicide note that B.C.'s proposed compulsory heroin treatment program "has as much chance to succeed as I have of flying to Jupiter on a Cessna."

Clifford Buckle, whose body was found in an East End hotel room, left notes to relatives and to the woman he lived with, pleading with them to understand his addiction to heroin.

Included in the letters were what Buckle called "non-personal thoughts" in which he argued against B.C.'s planned compulsory heroin addiction program and said few addicts can be reformed.

Expected to begin in January, 1979, the provincial heroin program would allow persons identified as heroin users, not necessarily convicted of anything, to be held for a minimum of six months behind locked doors, followed by compulsory treatment at a community clinic.

Buckle, an addict and criminal who worked on and off as a construction worker, tried unsuccessfully to stay on a treatment program using methadone, a synthetic drug which satisfies the craving for heroin but does not produce the euphoric high.

In his letter he wrote that he thought Britain's program would produce different results.

"I'm convinced that legalized drugs of our choice would decrease our crime rate by at least 70 per cent," he wrote. "Last summer I spoke to a hard-core addict who had been in England for four years with his brother.

"They are not using it now and doing very well.".

The letters were found after his death by his girlfriend, also an addict and prostitute who has been on methadone for the last 11 years.

She said that 12 months before Buckle committed suicide it looked as if he might quit heroin and he received heroin through prescriptions from her psychiatrist.

But he took up with old friends around Christmas and was soon taking heavy doses of depressant pills, she said.

"I knew he was suicidal," she said. "After living with me for three years and away from the street he was able to see his old life from a different viewpoint.

"When he went back, he hated it, but he was so hooked on pills he couldn't get away."

The woman said she is able to live a normal life on heavy doses of methadone because she can control her intake but she is unwilling to go through the agony of quitting outright.

"If they tried to force me to go through the program, I would take my own life first," she said.

(The B.C. Corrections Association has asked the government to delay the compulsory treatment legislation until other voluntary programs can be examined. See story on page 55).

Oops, just a minor oversight . . .

It seems that a number of ornamental trees planted in Sooke last year as part of an $1,800 beautification project have died of thirst, because no one was responsible for watering them.

When the Sooke Forum Council was told that at least 20 per cent of the trees are dead, a councillor inquired who was responsible for watering them.

The reported reply of Sooke regional director Charles Perkins: "It's nobody's job. That's the problem."

But Perkins said he had installed a water tank on the back of his pickup truck in an effort to water some of the trees, and some businessmen were tending those trees near their premises.

There's one consolation, though. If Sooke ever faces a Proposition 13 taxpayers' revolt, the service surely can't get much worse.

At present, the cases (but not the specific courtroom on the second or third floors of the Law Courts) are listed, without even the presiding judge's name, only on a bulletin board on the main floor.

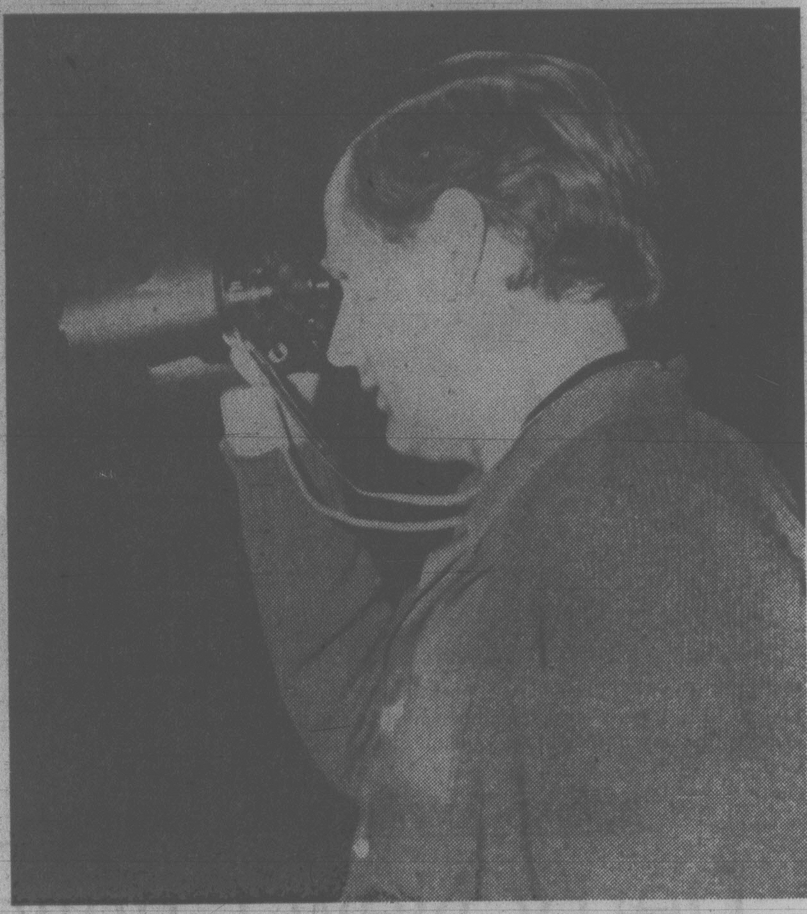
What have we ever done to the provincial government, to merit such an insult? Do we really deserve to be saddled with a name implying we're old fashioned and behind the times?

We refer to our latest mailed copy of the British Columbia Government News. The label bearing the address identifies us as "The Victorian Times."

To quote Queen Victoria, we are not amused.

Clammy Chills, Strange Flashes In the Darkness

Reporter Al Forrest turns to ghost writing and, accompanied by photographer John McKay, haunts Oak Bay's golf course in a spirited bid to spook out an eerie tale of the supernatural



Forrest keeps watch with infra-red binoculars

Just before midnight I felt the presence of the Oak Bay ghost.

There were also flashes of Something Strange.

And there was whistling that would scare anyone out of their wits.

The story begins when I was told that British Columbia's most famous ghost likes to make her appearance in May and June.

In fact, her most recent appearance on record was in 1968, exactly 10 years ago.

I needed a witness; one doesn't go ghost-hunting alone.

I asked Times photographer John McKay if he would accompany me through the Oak Bay golf course to sit and wait for the ghost to appear.

Without hesitating he said: "That sounds like a pretty dumb idea!"

But moments later he changed his mind. "Well, why not? Maybe it will be worth a laugh."

So we set out about 11 p.m. for the Lair of the Ghost. McKay was equipped with camera and flash gun while I had infra-red binoculars, the kind the Mounties and the CIA use to see in the dark.

The ghost has reportedly been seen many times in the 1950s and 60s. One guess is she is the spirit of a woman who was murdered on the golf course in 1936. But it might be some other troubled spirit. Still, the ghost is always seen only at the one place on the waterfront.

We reached the spot and it was forlorn and scarey.

Not a sound except the swish of the waves against the shore. To the southwest, both the land and water were in total darkness — nothing visible except the lights of Port Angeles across the strait.

To the northeast, where the ghost is supposedly seen, there was a bit of light, including one that sent reflections across the water.

When the ghost was sighted on previous occasions, the witnesses first experienced a cold, clammy chill that seemed to come up suddenly, changing their mood, and then they claimed they saw the ghost as a swiftly-drifting vaporous creature, moving along the beach.

Twice I felt the cold, clammy chill.

The first time I looked around excitedly — but nothing. Just the light playing off the water.

It was about five minutes later that I saw Something.

It was a white shape, swirling in the tall grass about 15 metres from the beach.

I grabbed my binoculars but couldn't find it. When I put down the glasses and looked, it had defintely vanished.

"I saw something," I told McKay. "But I dont know what it was."

He suggested we should be satisfied with that and go home. He took a couple of photos, using the flash.

"Hope the neighbors don't see the flash and call the police," he said.

"Yes. I can just see the headline now: Police Arrest the Oak Bay Flasher."

But we waited half an hour longer, giving the ghost every effort to show up. Suddenly it got very cold; there was a chill that cut right through me.

"Let's go," I said.

We began picking our way carefully through the dark when again I saw Something.

It was very quick, like a falling star, but moving just above the grass. By the time I wheeled around and got my glasses on the spot it had vanished.

It wasn't much. But I was struck by the coincidence. On both occasions I had felt cold and clammy and exactly five minutes later there was a glimpse of something — and both times in the tall grass near the beach.

We have no pictures of anything. Just a chill that won't go away.

Oh yes, the whistling: I heard it and I spun around quickly.

"What's that?!"

"It's me," McKay said.

"Oh! Thank goodness! But do you mind not whistling? My hair is already standing on end!"

Fire Guts Fairfield Store

Fire erupted in a shop in the Fairfield plaza this morning sending the owner, his wife and three customers running for their lives.

Wallace Read, owner of the Fairfield Variety Store, 1540 Fairfield, said he smelled smoke and suddenly saw fire coming from the back of the shop.

"It happened so fast we dropped everything and had to make a run for it," he said.

Three customers also darted out the door ahead of the flames.

The store was gutted and Read estimated damage to stock alone at $30,000. A fire official put the total loss at closer to $50,000.

Cause of the fire, reported at 10:32 a.m., isn't known but Read suspected an electrical failure.

While firemen were fighting the blaze, employees of Paddington's flower and bird shop next door at 1544 Fairfield sat on a curb of the parking lot surrounded by caged birds they had removed from the smoke.

Police Arbitrator Proprosed

Recently retired B.C. Supreme Court Justice Angelo Branca has been proposed by the Saanich police board as arbitrator in a dispute with the policemen's union over a new two-year contract.

But the union hasn't yet indicated if it approves the choice.

Five names submitted by the union have been rejected by the board.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, chairman of the police board, said that today is the deadline for picking an arbitrator. If the sides can't agree one will be appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The dispute centres on the wording of a cost-of-living clause in a new contract agreed to by both sides May 12.

DOWNCAST GRACE KEEPS SMILING

Tall Ships Ring Up No Sail

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy today expressed disappointment the Tall Ships did not have their sails up when they arrived this morning but she still managed a smile as she waved official greetings from a giant helicopter.

"I don't know why we were misinformed about the sails," she told a pre-arrival meeting at The Empress.

She publicly asked Capt. Cook Bicentennial Committee chairman Ed Sweeney to give or obtain an explanation.

There will be one full-sail demonstration of the two tall ships at Ogden Point dock at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Later, in an interview, she said the Victoria waterfront would be an exciting place all summer, although she was disappointed that the number of tall ships would be less than expected.

"We are just the hosts for the show. The race was organized by the American Sail Training Association and they are doing the best they can for us.

"There will be a race of the smaller ships.

"In addition, in July we will have the largest naval review here ever, the review of the grey ships."

The U.S. tall ship, the Eagle, will arrive in late July and this could prove to be the highlight of the festivities, she said.

Another tall ship, the Osprey of Japan, will soon be on its way to B.C. and hopefully will arrive in Victoria before it has to join the race from Seattle to San Francisco.

She announced that another tall ship, the Sagres, from Portugal, will arrive this autumn. It is scheduled to be in Vancouver from Oct. 17 to 22 but it has been invited to spend two of those days in Victoria.

Mrs. McCarthy said the American Sail Training Association will get its full $90,000 from the B.C. government for providing the vessels. She said an earlier-announced figure of $200,000 was erroneous.

Mrs. McCarthy, aldermen and reporters were taken by helicopter over the two Japanese tall ships as they lay at anchor at Esquimalt early this morning.

Okanagan Helicopters representative Kyle Steele said it was probably the largest chopper ever to fly over Victoria.

The 19,000-pound vehicle, the Sikorsky S-61, carries a maximum load of 32 passengers but regularly carries 26 passengers plus a crew of three.

Okanagan Helicopters hopes to obtain permission to use it for a regular Victoria-Vancouver service.

It is powered by two 1,500-horsepower motors and its rotors have a diameter of 62 feet.

In a demonstration run this morning, the chopper left the Johnson Street heli-pad in a cloud of dust and went to 1,000 feet before moving down to greet the tall ships.

The two Japanese vessels were lying at anchor, about 80 metres apart, outside Esquimalt harbor.

The chopper went down to 200 feet and began a figure eight pattern around and between the two ships.

The ships then hoisted anchor to sail, under power, to Ogden Point. After welcoming ceremonies, the two captains paid courtesy calls on Rear Admiral M.A. Martin, Commander Maritime Forces Pacific, Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, Mrs. McCarthy and Mayor Young.

Delivering Message Taxes City

City council wants Victoria ratepayers to know that local government isn't really to blame for increasing property taxes — but it can't decide how to get the message across.

A proposal to mail an explanatory letter to every householder in the city fell flat at a meeting of the finance committee Thursday when one of the aldermen asked how much such a mailing would cost.

"About $5,000," said city comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

"Forget it," said Mayor Mike Young.

Instead of the mailing, the committee decided simply to have a detailed report explaining the current tax increase on hand at city hall for anyone who wants to read it. If the demand is great enough the possibility of a mailing will come up again.

The four-page report lists the city's revenues and expenditures, briefly describes the 1978 capital program and explains that the provincial government is largely responsible for the tax hike. (The provincial government has already blamed the municipalities for it.)

The report says that 86 per cent of the properties in Victoria will experience a 5 to 15 per cent increase in assessment, while 9 per cent of the properties will have a 15 to 40 per cent increase and about 2 per cent will rise up to 5 per cent. Just over 1 per cent of the properties will experience a reduction in assessment.

The report says that as a result of provincial reassessments apartments are having their assessment reduced by an average of 15 per cent, while single-family residential taxable assessments are increasing by an average of 15 per cent.

"Your council has made a strong representation to the provincial government to right what is in our opinion an inequity in this legislation," states the report.

It also acknowledges that the city's capital program is partially responsible for higher taxes and goes on to list the major projects ordered by city hall in 1978.

Listed are public works projects, sewer and drain programs, improvements to the Crystal Pool and expenditures at various parks in the city.

Declines outnumbered advances 203 to 174 with 244 issues unchanged.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, faced with a continued rise in interest rates, slipped a bit further in moderate trading.

Numerous large banks raised their prime lending rates today from 8½ to 8¾ per cent, putting the basic charge on blue chip loans at its highest level since early 1975.

And many analysts were forecasting additional upward pressure on interest rates in the form of credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve Board.

In recent weeks the money supply has been growing considerably more rapidly than the Board wants it to as it seeks to curb inflation by limiting monetary growth.

Ramada Inns led the active list, off ⅞ to $6¾. The company issued a statement saying it had "given no consideration presently to entering the casino business."

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Massey-Ferguson dropped ¼ to $11¼, Canadian Pacific ⅛ to $17 and Seagram Co. ⅛ to $24½.

Campbell Red Lake Mines was up ½ to $32¼ and Dome Mines ⅛ to $78⅝.

Among speculative issues, Dynamic Mines was up two cents at $1.30 on a volume of 14,300 shares traded.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices edged moderately higher near the close of light trading on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 2.1 to 471.3 an hour before the close. Leading industrials reversed earlier losses, while gold issues extended small initial gains in line with higher bullion prices. Canadian stocks eased.

Fantasy Island Scores High As Newcomer

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The most promising newcomer in television's race for the ratings is Ricardo Montalban, who has been in Hollywood for 30 years.

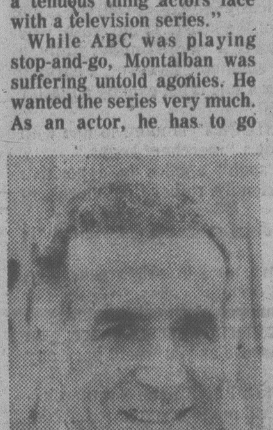
The Mexican-born actor stars as Roarke, the genial but slightly mysterious host of Fantasy Island, which appears to be ABC's new winner on Saturday night. In its debut as an hour-long series, the Spelling-Goldberg production scored sixth among the week's shows, beating Kojak and Doc Savage with an impressive 40-per-cent share of the audience.

"It's a good feeling," Montalban said at his home on a rare day off. "But I still find it hard to believe. Television is such a roll of the dice.

"Do you realize that I made the pilot for Fantasy Island a year and a half ago? Imagine—all that time! The first show was two hours, and it did well, so ABC ordered another two hours. Then they said, okay, go ahead with two one-hour shows and one two-parter—two hours with a continuing plot.

"Finally ABC said to go ahead with 13 one-hour shows. I never realized what a tenuous thing actors face with a television series."

While ABC was playing stop-and-go, Montalban was suffering untold agonies. He wanted the series very much. As an actor, he has to go where the work is. He calculates that in his 33 years of marriage to Georgiana Young, he has been away from home on locations and stage tours nine years.



Ricardo Montalban

"If the series didn't work, I would have to go on the road again," he said. "But every time I built up my hopes for the series, I would have them destroyed by a rotten review.

Indeed, Fantasy Island has drawn some of the most scathing reviews in recent times. But then, many critics found bad things to say about Charlie's Angels, Love Boat, Laverne and Shirley and All in the Family.

Judging from the high ratings on the Fantasy Island programs, the show has the same wide appeal. Montalban was asked to analyze it.

"First, there is the anthology aspect. The visiting actors are the protagonists in their chapters, while in most series the star is the protagonist. There is a predictability, because you know the star will survive to come back next week.

"Anthologies usually don't work in TV, because the audience likes to relate to constants. Even a good show like the Richard Boone anthology didn't succeed because the actors were always changing roles. Our show is tied together by the island, the continuing presence of Roarke (Montalban) and Tattoo (Herve Villechaize).

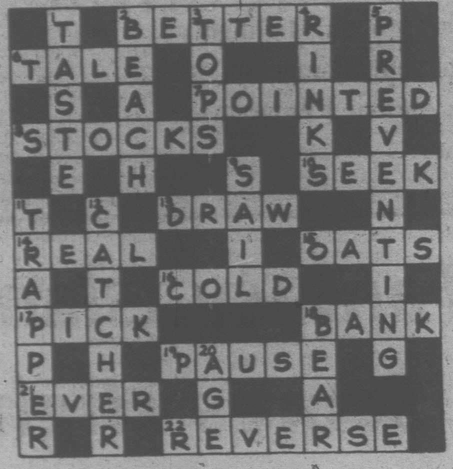
"The fantasy aspect is appealing; it gives the viewers a chance to dream, to vicariously live other peoples' fantasies.

"And I've been told that for a dramatic series to succeed, the actor must have the power of life and death. A detective has that, so does a doctor or a lawyer. Roarke also has the power of life and death."

The premise of the show is that people pay to visit the tropical isle and have their innermost desires fulfilled by a mysterious nost, often with unexpected results. But are the fantasies real or induced by hypnosis, drugs or whatever?

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES DOWN

1. TASTE not baste. Surely, being able to judge a dish by TASTE while preparing it is a talent possessed by good cooks. To baste is relatively easy.

2. BEACH not bench. Aptly, "BEACH" suggests a resort, often a favored location for the infirm; it also implies a distant prospect that one may gaze at (e.g., out to sea). The actual object that one may gaze at (e.g., out to sea). The actual object sat on (chair, bench, etc.) is less relevant to the clue's theme.

3. TOPS not tips. Anything long enough to be straggly is more than a mere tip, or extreme end.

4. RINKS not rings. The clue's view of rings/RINKS in terms of "surface" suits RINKS better, since one may well think of rings as structures with ropes, posts, etc.

5. PREVENTING not presenting. It's possible for "one" poor player to PREVENT the group performance being of the highest class. In the case of presenting, it's pointless to say "one musician" rather than simply a musician.

9. SAIL not fail. The clue's phrase: "However much of the time . . ." invites a literal interpretation related to the actual amount of time spent (as in SAILing) rather than a questin of how often you fail.

12. CATCHER not watcher. The clue means that this person needs to be alert — which is more necessarily true of a baseball CATCHER than of a "watcher," whatever that is.

20. AGE not awe. Advancing AGE is involuntary, but a person may be predisposed to be awed in a given case.

CLUES ACROSS

2. BETTER not bitter. Arguably, an "extremely angry" man will inevitably be bitter in his fight, and "may well" fight all the BETTER for being so.

6. TALE not male or sale. Regarding male, even if a woman is characteristically self-possessed, she is not immune from affairs of the heart; in any case, why should she regard a man as a "mere" male? Aptly, a TALE may play on the emotions; however, a bargain hunter's enthusiasm for a sale is not exactly a matter of becoming "emotional."

8. STOCKS not stacks. "STOCKS" is more in line with the idea of "goods" that a "merchant keeps."

10. SEEK not seem. A "snub" applies to a positive move SEEKing to be friendly, rather than merely to seeing willing to be so.

13. DRAW not drag. An audience that comes willingly is drawn, not dragged.

15. OATS not fast. Fats are used in cakes generally, rather than merely in "certain" cakes.

17. PICK not pack. With convenient travel in mind, you PICK such a bag for its lack of encumbrance; you pack it for the same purpose as you would pack any other bag to take.

18. BANK not band. It's up to a BANK to be commercially attractive in the general manner suggested. Artistically, a band may go its own way.

22. REVERSE not reverie. The clue's word "when" (as opposed to if) suits REVERSE better — implying a regular or understood practice. Also, in a reverie, it's all too easy (not merely "quite easy") to have an accident.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Hope for High Hopes

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NUALA FITZGERALD and Bruce Gray spend a lot of time together as Paula Myles and Dr. Neal Chapman in the syndicated drama, High Hopes.

NEW YORK — TV's syndicated soap, "High Hopes," is produced in Toronto, Canada, but the locale doesn't enter the picture as far as the plot is concerned.

The actors are mainly Canadians but the show takes on an international flavor with Ireland's gift to Canada's acting ranks, Nuala FitzGerald, playing Paula Myles. The lovely Irish actress still has a slight trace of brogue which surfaces every few sentences, but she considers herself a Canadian actress since she has been toiling in Canada's theatre and TV ranks for a number of years.

"I came to Canada with my husband and just stayed," said Nuala. "actually, I've been quite lucky in getting acting jobs in TV from the start. I also did a great deal of theatre and raised a family in between."

Unlike the divorced character she plays in "High Hopes," Nuala has three sons, ranging in age from 10 to 21, and lives in a large, comfortable house which serves as a sanctuary from the "trials and tribulations" of her TV character.

Nuala is very fond of the cast of "High Hopes" and she particularly singled out Bruce Gray, who plays the leading male role of Dr. Neal Chapman. At this point in the story line, Neal and Paula are sharing a lot of time together; and, on a recent trip to new York City to promote the soap, Nuala and Bruce took in some of the sights together.

"Bruce is a fine actor and works hard to get everything just so. In fact, the whole cast works well together and we think the early rough spots have been smoothed over," the charming actress said.

Since Nuala's Paula is a fashion co-ordinator in a department store, she took advantage of being in New York City to visit some of the fashionable stores. Even though the actress in her was working, soaking up atmosphere and attitude for her role, the woman in her couldn't resist going on a buying spree.

"I was able to go from floor to floor in Bergdorf's in record time," said Nuala. "I just breezed through picking up an item here and an item there. it was great fun."

Channel Chatter. There will be two plot lines running on "Guiding Light" which will incorporate footage shot on location in the Bahamas — Nassau to be exact. One of the plot lines will revolve around Dr. Peter Chapman's past; and Curt Dawson, who plays Dr. Chapman, finished his location shooting while Janet Grey and Stephen Yates (they play newlyweds Evie and Ben McFarren) were shooting their honeymoon scenes on the island as part of the second plot theme. Producer Leslie Kwartin, who accompanied the cast and crew to Nassau, feels the location shooting will enhance the show a great deal over the summer . . . Michael Storm, who plays likable Dr. Larry Woleck in "One Life to Live," is set to do a play at New York's Hudson Guild Theatre. It's called "Just the Immediate Family" and that could easily describe some of the plot lines in his soap . . . The "Love of Life" cast said farewell to Jerry Lacy and Roxanne Gregory (they played the Latimers) who left Rosehill to work in Quebec. That move always leaves the door open for a return if the writers so wish. Jerry is heading west for movie work and prime-time TV jobs. Roxanne is going to concentrate on her singing, with her eye towards a role in a musical on Broadway . . . Get ready for a new love theme on "Search for Tomorrow." The song, title "Sweet Beginnings," with music and lyrics by Lanny Meyers, is used in conjunction with romance between Tom Bergman (played by handsome John James) and Kylie Halliday (played by lovely Lisa Buck). The song is sung by Kasey Cisyk, who sang "You Light Up My Life" in the movie . . . Soap Opera Festivals have been announced for Allentown, Pa; Madison, Wis.; and Nashville, Tenn. Soap fans in those areas should keep an eye out for dates of the "festivals."

Plot portents: Lorie's fling publishing her sensational book, "In My Sister's Shadow," only widens the breach between the author and husband Lance on "The Young and the Restless." Lucas doesn't seem to mind, having hot eyes for his sister-in-law. The new blonde doctor Casey Reed fails to stir Snapper, but perhaps that will come later. Casey's sis, Nikki, is rapidly being groomed as a carefree troublemaker.

Now it's time for nuptials between sweet, caring Marlena and Don in "Days of Our Lives." Bad sister Samantha plans to be maid of honor, so a storm looms ahead. As for a wedding between Margo and Mike, keep your fingers crossed. Margo, the leukemia victim, deep down believes Mike feels sorry for her and that's why he's marrying her.

Many things happen on "Edge of Night" this week. April is rushing to tell Miles the truth about Denise when she falls down the stairs — will she lose the baby? Miles hears of Denise's deception and makes plans to go back to Monticello. Denise, on the other hand, finds out the shocking truth about herself.

John Hearn's Collectibles

A recent issue of the Financial Times carries an article by Ken Waxman, about the soaring prices of old phonograph records and what makes them collectible. He mentions Bobby Darin's That's All on Atco Records ($28.), Guy Lombardo on Gennett ($75.), the soundtrack of One Eyed Jacks on Liberty ($45.), and works by tenor, Jean de Reske ($100.). It is all very exciting and will send our hoarders rushing to their attics in search of similar riches.

All, however is not pure gold. If an obscure tenor like Jean de Reske fetches $10., how much should you expect from an authentic Caruso? Answer; maybe $2. because Caruso's records sold by the million.

"Collecting vintage records," says Waxman, "is like collecting rare books. The most treasured items are in short supply and must be in immaculate condition." In practice, first editions books are less difficult to collect; they are more easily identified, there is a vast literature and antiquarian expertise available to verify an important find. The most collectible records are not LIKE first editions, they ARE first editions. Some went through many re-issues and are far from easy to identify. As far as condition is concerned, Waxman says, "For top prices, records must be near-mint. People will take records with a few fingerprints but not scratches."

The word 'mint' also very much applies to the cover. The jacket, says Waxman, can sometimes make up half the record's price. The overwhelming majority of records in our attics are by popular artists and will have been played hundreds of times with a blunt steel needle. No serious collector would look at them.

A friend of mine who sells at our local flea market thought he was onto a good thing a year or two back when he started buying quantities of old '78s from people's attics for 10¢ each and selling them for 50¢ — a handsome 500 per cent mark-up. Record collectors made a bee-line for his table and sales were brisk. After three months he took his entire stock down to the dump and went out of the record business.

How come. Sales were booming but he was selling far less than one in five of those he bought — and therefore losing money. Moreover the number of unsold records was piling up at an alarming rate.

In writing this column I am very much influenced by the letters I receive all the time. Most of them are not from collectors but from readers who own something which they would like me to price and suggest a buyer for them — which I am not able to do. Collecting is for collectors. It is a buyer's market. If a collectible turns into an investment it is because of the knowledgeability and experience of the collector, not because of any intrinsic value in the thing itself. The first ingredient is enthusiasm. Collecting records is for music lovers, not investors. There is an old Galli-Curci record (Dite ala giovine from Traviata with Tito Schipa) which I would love to own — and I am not a collector. It was she who first turned me on to opera, way back in my far off youth. But once you get one Galli-Curci record you want another . . . and another. That's how collections begin.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ontario.

Whispers from Space

A whispering trace of energy left over from the theoretical "big bang" billions of years ago may now be telling us, quietly, about the origins of the universe.

Nova explores one theory of the universe's beginnings in A Whisper from Space Wednesday, June 21, at 8 p.m. (rebroadcast Saturday, June 24, at 7 p.m.) on Channel 9.

In 1965, Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson, two radio astronomers of Bell Telephone Laboratories, discovered faint, but ever present, microwave signals in space — the oldest "fossil" signals in the universe known by man. Their discovery led to a surge in "cosmic archaeology" as scientists try to understand the very beginnings of the universe.

Philip Morrison, Professor of Physics at MIT, and other scientists have been trying to employ these signals in understanding the relationship between the stars, galaxies and the space between them. Morrison sets up a model for NOVA from which he extrapolates the primary particle matter that perhaps was the building block from the creation of the universe.

While wary of the borderline between pure conjecture and valid theory based on known principles, Morrison takes a hard look at the questions that concern cosmologists today: Is the universe expanding? Was there a big bang, or some lesser release of energy? Can we extrapolate back before the big bang? And how did such a variety of materials develop from the uniform and universal hydrogen?

Although many of the questions can only be answered by conjecture, Morrison uses what we already know to point out some fascinating possibilities.

NOVA is a production of WGBH/Boston made possible by grants from Exxon, the National Science Foundation, Public Television Stations, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and the Ford Foundation.

LOVELY BETTY Buckley stars as Abbey in the ABC Television Network's modern-day, one-hour comedy-drama "Eight is Enough," which airs Wednesdays on Channel 4. In the series, Ms. Buckley married the widowed father of eight children and helps him share in the joys and sometimes minor difficulties of raising the children — who range in age from eight to 23.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD —The TV Mailbag;

Q. Is the series "CHiPS" supposed to be a non-violent television show? Of the episodes I have seen, the two characters haven't pulled their guns once. — A.T., Cornwall-on-Hudson, N.Y.

A. Because "CHiPS" is shown during the family hour, 8 to 9 p.m., violence is kept to a minimum. Although the three networks have no written policy forbidding violence on the tube, they have agreed to restrict violence during that period of the evening when children are watching television.

A spokesperson for NBC said "CHiPs" is supposed to be an action series with as little violence as possible. During several episodes, the two officers have drawn their weapons, although not firing them.

"This is a family show in which every member of the family can watch," the NBC spokesperson said.

Q. Can you please tell me the address of Shawn Cassidy? — K.C., Leavittsburg, Ohio.

A. I suggest you write him at Universal Television, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. Is Red West, who plays Sgt. Mikelin on "Black Sheep Squadron," really the kind of guy he plays on the show? — M.O., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. West says no, that he's really a quiet sort of guy.

A. I recently have enjoyed several episodes of the most fun detective show on television in a long time. It is called "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye." Can we expect to see more episodes of this series in the future? I really hope it will be returning to its own time spot. — G.P., Victoria, B.C.

A. NBC introduced "Richie Brockelman" as a possible series for the 1978-79 season. It was placed in the Friday night time slot usually occupied by "Rockford FIles" and received fairly decent ratings. NBC has yet to announce its fall line-up, but the show has a reasonable chance on making it.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Revue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Wonder Woman 'Typed'

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Wonder Woman" did wonders for Lynda Carter's career, but it almost destroyed Cathy Lee Crosby who played the role originally.

Cathy Lee starred in the title role when "Wonder Woman" made its debut as a TV movie three years ago.

She was a natural for the part. Cathy Lee is the enbodiment of the young, healthy, sexy California blonde, clean-limbed, tanned, freckled and self-confident. You've seen her on TV commercials pitching soft drinks, automobiles and cosmetics.

She has been compared to top model Cheryl Tiegs. She also is said to resemble the young Katharine Hepburn with Hepburn's deep-set eyes, high cheekbones and square jaw.

A serious actress who had appeared in episodic television in addition to commercials, Cathy Lee thought she was on her way to stardom when she accepted the "Wonder Woman" pilot film, hoping it would become a weekly series.

But she and ABC-TV came to a parting of the ways when decisions were made on how Wonder Woman should be interpreted. Cathy Lee wanted to play her in the James Bond 007 image. The network opted for a comic strip character.

As Cathy Lee tells it, Warner Bros., which produced the pilot, sided with her. They saw Wonder Woman as sophisticated camp. But ABC bought out Warners and Cathy Lee was hung out to dry.

It wasn't the loss of the role — which went to Lynda Carter — that bothered the leggy beauty as much as the reaction of producers and casting directors who saw her in "Wonder Woman."

"All I got was offers for roles over 5-feet-10," she said. "I was instantly typed for fantasy characters."

Unaccustomed to that sort of rejection, Cathy Lee went into a blue funk and began to examine her career, lifestyle and possible options.

But she is an old pro as a performer, beginning at 5 on her parents local Hollywood talk show, "The Crosby's Calling."

"Once I was 86'd (thrown out) from 'Wonder Woman' and the offers came in for fantasy roles I was stigmatized as an actress who couldn't act," Cathy Lee said. "I had to get away from Hollywood and get my head on straight.

"So I spent seven months traveling around the world by myself looking for some meaning in my life. I just didn't feel as if I belonged as an actress.

"I had some wild experiences, including a meeting with a gypsy lady in Turkey who predicted what would happen to me in the next seven years. So far she's running 85-90 percent right.

"Seven months ago I began taking acting lessons with Milton Kateselas, the director, and it changed how I felt about acting and being an artist. Then good things began happening to me.

"I tested for Dino DeLaurentiis in 'Hurricane' and 'Four To Go.' Although I wasn't right for the parts, Dino called my agents and told them I was a brilliant actress. I needed results like that out there to convince people in the business I could act."

In the past seven months Cathy Lee has completed two new movies, "The Dark" with William Devane, and "Coach" in which she stars as the coach of a boys high schooln, author of "Dragons of Eden," said Monday he was "flabbergasted" that his nonfiction book won the Pulitzer Prize.

He revealed that, when reporters first phoned him, he thought it was a practical joke.

"But the calls kept coming," the Cornell University astronomer said. "I've never won a literary award before," the past winner of a NASA Medal for Exceptional Scientific Achievement added.

JOHN RITTER (c) will introduce a lineup of talented professional newcomers as viewers select the best of the new entertainers on "America Votes for Tomorrow's Stars," a live, two-hour telecast Saturday, June 17 at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

PICKERSGILL . . . a tragic and inspiring story

War is one of the great archetypal subjects, like ambition, love and death. So it's no wonder that we continue not hearing the last of it, even though wars as this planet has known them have virtually ceased to exist.

The two World Wars in particular have been described, examined and recalled ad infinitum, yet still there remain new words to say and valuable ways of re-stating what has already been said. Witness a revised version of The Pickersgill Letters, a book which first appeared in 1948 and for years has been obtainable only from libraries and second-hand bookshops at prices around $30.

The book's new title is The Making of a Secret Agent. As editor George H. Ford points out in his introduction, it differs from many other "war books" because it illustrates the effect of war on a "highly colorful and distinctly original individual", and not the other way around.

The Making of a Secret Agent contains all the letters written by Frank Pickersgill to his family and friends between 1934 and 1943 which appeared in the original volume, plus five new ones. Ford has also revised the accompanying narrative to include many new facts which have come to light since 1948. Yet still The Making of a Secret Agent does not tell us all we want to know. An age that has at last begun to acknowledge its heroes needs a full-scale biography of such a man.

Frank Pickersgill was born on the family farm near Ashern, Manitoba in 1915, the youngest of five children. His mother, who had to raise her brood alone after the death of Frank's father in 1920 (he had "never recovered from the disabilities of service" with the 16th Canadian Scottish during World War I, decided to move the family to Winnipeg in the interests of higher education when Frank was 11. This city, where he lived until he was 21, became a reference point by which all others were judged. Toronto, in 1936, was "far more uncivilized than Winnipeg". Paris reminded him of it in 1938, because of "the wide streets and the intelligent looking people on them — as well as the nonchalant way in which the pedestrians disregard traffic regulations." Even parts of Warsaw recalled Winnipeg, all of which goes to prove, one suspects, that you can take the boy out of Canada but you can't take the Canadian out of the boy.

This sounds a trivial point, but it lies at the heart of the Frank Pickersgill story. Editor Ford, who knew Pickersgill well, believes that Frank was converted from "a peaceful isolationist to a dedicated fighter" by the intellectual and emotional changes and developments in his psyche during his six years in Europe. But there is enough clear evidence to suggest that the seeds of the "dedicated fighter" were planted 'way back in Ashern, in Pickergill's heredity and upbringing. His story is as tragic as it is inspiring because it is the story of a good and brave man who was trapped by his own destiny.

The facts of Frank Pickersgill's European career are soon told. He began as a graduate student in Paris in 1938, but his affinity for the language and the people of France drew him into an extended stay.

Eye-witness journalism, inquisitive travels across Europe and eventual political detention in Occupied France followed. He made a daring escape to England in 1942, complete with hacksaw concealed in a loaf of bread, and immediately began training as a secret agent for resistance activity. But the French network Pickersgill was sent to join was in the process of being destroyed by German intelligence, and he was captured almost at once. The rest is a dreadful history of beatings, torture and brutal death at Buchenwald, relieved by survivors' accounts of his courage and spirit to the end.

"Frank Pickersgill was a man who knew how to live and how to die," said one. "You don't come across many of them who can do both quite so well. You should not forget him in Canada."

Rest assured, no one who reads The Making of a Secret Agent is likely to forget Frank Pickersgill. His intelligence, humor and moral courage are as gripping as his adventures, and he shares with Hemingway the rare gift of being a man of action who can also write.

It is no wonder so many of his letters have survived. They reveal the old story of the innocent abroad amid European corruption, and a powerful argument for the contention that in any contest of ultimate strength, corruption must be the loser to basic human decency.

Running Toward Eternity

From THE ZEN OF RUNNING, by Fred Rohe. Published by Random House.

By ERIC ROBERTS

"Running is the total experience." With the multitude of profound and conflicting statements pouring forth in this era of self-analysis, such a declaration could easily go unnoticed. But if the populace encountered this statement in the course of a psychology lesson it most assuredly would be disputed, contradicted and tossed aside.

Yet, can all those thousands of joggers be wrong? It's not just a "craze" that's sweeping the world. All the industrialized countries are going through this mass preoccupation with running. Often entertaining an interest that far exceeds normal fitness levels and a healthy body, these runners are turning the marathon race into a "big-time sport" with entries multiplying enormously every year.

No one has been more adept at answering critics than Dr. George Sheehan. He has developed a unique insight into the "whys" of running, and with his latest book, Running and Being, the Total Experience, he has matched anything yet written about the psychology of the athlete and more closely, the runner.

* * *

Dr. Sheehan has discovered, through more than 50 marathons, the latest at the age of 59, and hours upon hours of total contentment "out on the road", what it really means to find one's identity. His transformation of a chronically depressed outlook on life to one in which it is a fantastic game has prompted him to teach and lecture others on what he has uncovered.

Understandably, he won't convince those not inclined to athletics that running has bountiful joys. Rare is the person who participated in physical exercise on another's advice that "it's good for you."

Cardiologist and columnist George Sheehan is most revered by those millions of joggers, runners and racers who have been helped in understanding their "addiction." Considered the Guru to the running world, what particularly endears him to his disciples is his contagious insistence that running is something more than just a sport . . . that it is an activity offering glimpses of values profound and eternal.

* * *

With tongue in cheek, but still revealing his philosophy, was a recent quote: "A good run around your psychiatrist's office might do much more good than going through the door."

Along with the great demand for shoes, shorts and assorted paraphernalia sought by the runner, has come a conflicting deluge of mis-information (myths) on the hazards of being a "jogger." Unfortunately, much of this has been handed out from a sincere but sometimes uninformed source — the medical profession. With the desire we have to completely trust our doctor, this scare information unfortunately can be highly detrimental to the beginner, especially one trying to recover lost athletic ability.

* * *

None has better shattered these myths than Dr. Sheehan in his quest for rebirth. Starting at the age of 44, he soon found that the "loneliness" of the long-distance runner was the number one myth . . . buried forever in the pain and pleasure of competing with himself and his fellow runner. He gave credibility where there was doubt and inspiration where there was despair. Many a former skeptical doctor has moved closer to Sheehan's thinking thanks to this man's ability to pit his strengths in such a gruelling test as a marathon.

Running and Being provides insights into ourselves by a talented and astute runner. Along with this comes a "ditty-bag" full of hints, clues and assorted tipson adjusting to the multitude of running experiences to be encounted once you put on that first pair of jogging shoes.

RUNNING AND BEING, THE TOTAL EXPERIENCE, by Dr. George Sheehan. Musson. $11.25.

More Dazzling Blarney from Ginger Man

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Readers of The Ginger Man or of The Beastly Beatitudes of Balthazar B will know what to expect from J. P. Donleavy's latest rollicking novel. It's more of the same: the picaresque energy of a Fielding laced with the sexual shenanigans of the twentieth century.

Donleavy's books somersault between one comic setpiece and the next. Yet despite their blarney, I doubt whether his novels achieve much beneath their shimmering surface. The new work, for instance, doesn't lead to anything significant about life itself, and as a satire it relies upon conventional comic types from a rural Irish never-never-land in the 1920's.

In spite of the chuckles and guffaws he provokes, Donleavy always leaves me with a sense of frustration. His brilliant dialogue and energetic style weave enchanting curlicues across a void.

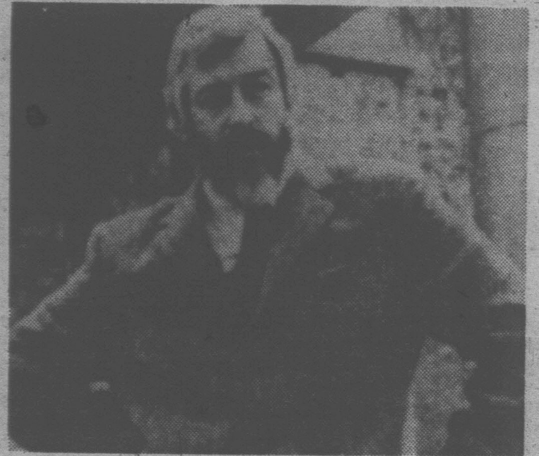
With that proviso, let me admit to succumbing yet again to Donleavy's comic verve. The latest novel relates the fortunes of Darcy Dancer, heir to the crumbling estate of the Darcy Thormonds. The sporting wastrel, who may or may not be his father, removes Darcy's two sisters to England and raids the estate and its livestock for ready cash. Darcy is left to wander the decaying halls of Andromeda Park in the care of his love-lorn tutor, Mr. Arland, whose quaint turns of phrase shape the precocious speeches of Darcy himself.

The mansion's remaining eccentrics provide a still more singular education for the gentleman-in-embryo. Sexton, the tearfully sentimental gardener, encapsulates the world in folk wisdom and latin tags; "every madman thinks everyone else mad" is an early aphorism which launches Darcy into life. There's also a cross-eyed, bibulous butler and a bevy of housemaids who disappear from view as their stomachs grow rounder. Or Foxy, the stable-boy, who belongs to the world of hard knocks, given and received, and who leads Darcy to his first sexual encounter.

But the lode-star of what one might call Darcy's formative years is Miss von B., a Juno-esque beauty of aristocratic pretensions who, with teutonic thoroughness, scours away the mold and shores up the ruin of Andromeda Park. She also introduces Darcy to an appreciation of a pair of well-turned riding-breeches and much else besides: "Madam I do think you are taking liberties with me. Assuming as you do that I am young and innocent and not able to protect myself."

In these surroundings Darcy is soon able to protect himself, even though he never loses his essential innocence and good nature. He learns the joys of the fox-hunt and the boudoir and the fact that "unless you were better off where you've been, you're always better off where you are."

With these essentials he is sent off for a more formal schooling and a quick taste of Dublin's low-life en route. At school his lively independence and the pull of his aristocratic bloodline collide with that establishment's bullying mafiosi, and he's off on the run, meeting every hurdle with the stamina of the Dancer, the race-horse whose name he bears.



DONLEAVY
. . . scatalogical

Each test of his character explodes into elaborate farce. Among the more quotable of these is a dinner in the mansion of a newly-rich tradesman where the butler gets drunk, the maids hysterical, and the guests grow monstrous as the liquor flows and the food burns away in the kitchens: "God was I laughing. My belly wracked with pain. And I fear, my feet squashing spuds. And with Assumpta hors de combat, Smears squiffed, the master finally came storming down the stairs shouting and screaming at the top of his lungs and rushing into the kitchen where at that very moment I had eight different liquors open with Smears and cook tasting each with the uttermost blotto sincerity. 'You damn idiot fools. Where's the bloody roast beef the bloody main course, the creamed damn onions. Don't you know what you are doing.' "

Those who don't object to humor larded with four-letter words and scatalogical detail will revel in The Destinies of Darcy Dancer, Gentleman. And, of course, Darcy's adventures lead him finally to fortune and his inheritance as a protestant Irish sporting gentleman of rapacious tastes and a good heart.

* * *

That narrative thrust is what's lacking in Helen Wykham's new novel, Cavan. It, too, is an exercise in sexual grotesquerie, but where Donleavy sends Darcy leaping through his adventures, Miss Wykham weaves her eccentrics into a tight knot, and the fetid atmosphere of her book quickly becomes oppresive and, to me, uninteresting.

Yet the novel promises well. Its first pages seem to bear out the praising snippets from critics of her first book that lie enticingly on the dust-jacket. She has a poetic sense of language that injects new life into a tired word or phrase by the oddity of its new context: "Smith was afraid of Hannah's inclination to house the homeless for a night or two. She was unable to deal with gypsies, meths-drinkers, unfrocked priests and flighty Borstal boys. She was totally unable to offer them sherry convincingly . . ."

But when this oddly focussed style is harnessed in the pursuit of defiantly odd characters, the peculiarity becomes a self-indulgence. I could not scrape together enough interest to bother about the fates of three sisters whose uneasy equipoise topples before the arrival of Cavan.

His primitive, fertility-god's aura unravels the true nature of each of the sisters. One is a repressed schoolmarm; another a natural trollop; the third an enormous lesbian earth-mother. These excesses seemed to me to be devoid of any central reality, and I confess to the bewilderment of those two proverbial Victorian theatregoers who could only murmur: "How very different from the home life of our own dear Queen!"

* * *

In completely different vein is Catherine Gavin's None Dare Call It Treason. Its highly-colored dust-jacket, replete with the usual paraphernalia of the spy story (dagger, identity card, carnation and money-belt), did not prepare me for the serious political statement within.

Dr. Gavin was a war-correspondent during the last debacle and has a first-hand knowledge of the ruthlessness with which De Gaulle sought to organize the various pockets of resistence in France to his own self-image. That disenchantment with the General gives her book its startling impetus.

Captain Jack, her barrister hero, and his girl friend, Polly, are little more than ciphers on which to hang a smoothly managed, if rather ordinary plot. When the Germans decide to cross into the unoccupied zone of France, tensions between the various resistance cells in and around Nice give vent to recrimination and betrayal.

But Dr. Gavin sets that story against tensions on a world-wide scale, between De Gaulle, Churchill and Roosevelt, as the Allies prepare to land in French North Africa. The betrayals are echoed by the actual events of history: the fact that the French scuttled their fleet, rather than deliver it to their allies, and saw the allied landings as an invasion of French territory. Both levels of the story converge when Captain Jack escapes to London only to become victim to his own countrymen, the Free French.

The novel is a lethal indictment of De Gaulle's 18th century view of his own destiny and his attitude to his Anglo-Saxon allies. In the light of what happened later, De Gaulle's resounding "Non" to Britain's overtures to the Common Market, Dr. Gavin's version rings true and made me want to test the facts behind the Gaullist legend for myself.

However, the book is by no means anti-French. Dr. Gavin obviously loves the landscapes of the Midi and the stubborn individuality of its people. What starts as a conventional adventure story grows into a lucid and intelligent examination of the different directions in which patriotism can be twisted.

Reading this while my emotions were being whipped up by Holocaust on TV led me to think that few nations can afford a holier-than-thou attitude about their role in the last war or, for that matter, in any war.

Existential Irony, Moral Paradox in a Light Mix

By JULIAN REID

Dan Jacobson is a South African-born writer, now living in London, who in recent years has won himself a considerable reputation as a novelist. The Confessions of Josef Baisz is his sixth novel — but I must confess that it marks my first encounter with his work.

In conception at least, this is one of those books which deserves that overworked critical nonce-word, "inspired." For Jacobson has presented us with the supposed "autobiography" of a rather seedy modern-day Judas, nothing less — the possessor of a self-confessed "malign talent" for loving betrayal, who pursues an erratic career as a stool-pigeon, a paid police informer, a kidnapper, a murderer, and a moral counsellor to political prisoners, all in the questionable service of the government of the fictitious "Republic of Samedia," a "ramshackle dictatorship" on the Central European model.

One would be hard-pressed to think of a more promising premise; and when it comes to the topic of love and betrayal, Jacobson has some interesting and insightful observations to make. Moreover, he presents them both wittily and well.

Here, for instance, is Josef Baisz reflecting on that "insidious, unfathomable gift" which renders him so painstakingly human: "To wound and to love; to love what I wounded; to betray and look pittyingly on the consequences of my treachery; and to do it again — and again — and again — and each time as if for the very first time, with a trembling, magnetized sense of fate or inevitability upon me: that was my addiction."

But striking as such individual passages are, the book as a whole is not nearly as effective as it could be. For all the ingenuity and wit with which he has been conceived and presented, Josef Baisz remains an essentially superficial creation — somewhat better than a mere two-dimensional lay-figure, to be sure; but nevertheless something less than roundly and commandingly realized in all his dubious humanity.

Similarly, the fictitious "Samedian" setting against which he plays out his little comedy of morals is solidly but somewhat unimaginatively crafted, remaining finally merely an elaborate studio-set — an admirable creation in its way, but never an entirely convincing one. And the handling of the climactic key scene, Baisz's final and most appropriately ambiguous act of betrayal, is similarly anemic, at once rather lifelessly perfunctory and all too palpably contrived.

But don't misunderstand me. Within its limits, The Confessions of Josef Baisz is an interesting and thoroughly readable novel — a commendably polished "entertainment," to borrow Graham Greene's term, with a little dash of depth to add some extra spice. But measured against the inevitable touchstone of that comparably ingenious black comedy of love and betrayal, Kurt Vonnegut's brilliant Mother Night, it shows up as a mere two-dimensional sketch of what it might have been.

Still, if you're looking for a well-conceived but fundamentally undemanding exercise in existential irony, with a lot to offer in the way of moral paradox but comparatively little when it comes to psychological profundity, Dan Jacobson's latest should prove rewarding enough. It represents not so much a betrayal of inspired concept as a glancing kiss off a somewhat raffish cheek. A kiss, let us say, worth a mere fifteen pieces of silver — and that perhaps, under the circumstances, is all we can reasonably ask.

The rise and fall of an unusual American family

THE DULLES . . . Eleanor, Allen and Foster

When Leonard Mosley was doing the research for his biography of Eleanor, Allen, and John Foster Dulles he corresponded with master-spy Kim Philby, who, in the first of several letters from Moscow, commented: "You have found a fascinating subject." He has indeed.

The Dulles brothers were never my favorite people and I was quite happy to think they had disappeared into limbo. It was typical of Allen Dulles that in "his" books (The Craft of Intelligence, etc.) he never acknowledged the debt he owed to his collaborator Howard Roman. And Townsend Hoopes' fine biography, The Devil and John Foster Dulles (Little Brown, 1973), confirmed Alistair Buchan's view that he was "one of the most unattractive figures in modern history."

But if Leonard Mosley considered the brothers worth exhuming that was good enough for me, for Mosley, novelist, biographer, historian, and renowned foreign correspondent (London Sunday Times) has always fulfilled my greatest expectations. To combine the stories of the brother with that of their largely unknown sister, Eleanor, was, as Philby recognized, a particularly bright idea.

Mosley sketches the formative years deftly in a short opening chapter. Reverend Allen Macy Dulles, a Presbyterian minister, believed in a tough regimen for his children. For example, not until they were adults did they experience the luxury of a hot bath!

No Sympathy

Foster was righteous even as a small boy. A brilliant student, serious, even-tempered, he was a paragon of all the virtues — except one. He was totally devoid of sympathy. Allen was born with a club foot, considered by his father to be something dark and shameful. Although the deformity was rectified, this "Achilles heel," as Foster called it, caused Allen, throughout his life, to over-compensate to prove himself to himself.

Eleanor, who revered her brothers, emulated them academically and physically, even to the point of ignoring illness and pain.

And so we have Foster, brilliant, ruthless, arrogant — the undisputed leader; Allen, alternating between angelic charm and black rages, a boy both ambitious and romantic; and Eleanor, the intellectual equal of her brothers but doomed to be the victim of sex discrimination. The hierarchy continued when they became, respectively, statesman, spy, and high government official, forming the strangest and most powerful family network in the history of U.S. politics.

Thanks to their uncle, Robert Lansing, Woodrow Wilson's secretary of state, all three were present at the Versailles Peace Conference in 1919, America's debut as a major power. Foster was an official delegate, working with Maynard Keynes on the issue of reparations. He made his mark, thanks in the main to information fed him by Eleanor, who was already recognized as an expert in international economics and German and Austrian affairs.

Allen, who had received his first taste of Intelligence while serving as junior diplomat in Switzerland, had no right to be in Versailles at all. In fact, his sole claim to fame was that he had refused to see V. I. Lenin after office hours, thus leaving Lenin to catch a train for his appointment with history.

After the heady atmosphere of Versailles came the let-down. Foster returned to his Wall Street law firm, shortly to become senior partner; Allen, disenchanted with diplomacy (but not with Intelligence), joined his brother's firm; and Eleanor returned to her desk in the Commerce Department.

During the next couple of decades Foster made himself an expert in foreign affairs, spoke publicly at every opportunity and came to be regarded by Republicans as a potential secretary of state. Allen played at law and spent most of his time (when he wasn't womanizing) cultivating his old friends in the spy business. The self-effacing Eleanor was the one who made family news.

On one of her official trips to Paris she met and fell in love with an unusual man. He was a Jew, a famous Hebrew scholar, who had renounced Orthodoxy and abandoned his wife and son. Astonishingly, Foster — a WASP personified — gave his blessing to a "sinful" domestic arrangement pending a divorce. They eventually married, but the union was doomed. The husband felt guilty over Hitler's treatment of the Jews, and when Eleanor became pregnant his guilt overwhelmed him. Unable to face a child of his with Gentile blood, he committed suicide. Eleanor, true to the Dulles tradition, never missed a day's work.

Helped Dewey

During this period Allen and Foster clashed ideologically. Allen, a confimed Anglophile, wanted the U.S. to aid Britain in any war against Germany. Foster, an America-Firster, felt Hitler was merely righting the wrongs of Versailles and that the U.S. should remain above the fray. To this end he masterminded Tom Dewey's campaign against Roosevelt in the 1940 presidential election.

He was also Dewey's right-hand man in the 1944 campaign and again in 1948 when Truman licked Dewey. Foster had four more years to wait for his reward.

Meanwhile, the war enabled the eager Allen to return to the spy business and he excelled himself as OSS chief in Switzerland, where his love of intrigue and derring-do (and sexual exploits) were given full rein. After the war, the OSS became the CIA and Allen joined it in a senior capacity.

Neither was Eleanor idle. She was sent to Austria and worked like a slave to get that country back on its economic feet. As a reward she was offered, and accepted, control of the Berlin desk in the state department.

The family network was now nicely in place to take full advantage of the 1952 presidential election. Foster threw his weight behind Eisenhower. Eleanor provided him with telling economic facts, and Allen fuelled his speeches on foregn policy, which concentrated on the menace of communism in Europe and Asia. The "liberation of the captive peoples" was the CIA line and Allen sold this to his brother, who in turn sold it successfully to the American people.

When Eisenhower became president his choice of Foster as secretary of state was no surprise; neither was the appointment soon after of Allen as head of the CIA. The delighted Eleanor cultivated West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who became Foster's staunchest European ally. The family network had reached its apogee.

Dirty Tricks

This is the barest outline of Mosley's story. The full tale includes, of course, the coups and dirty tricks of the CIA, Foster's cynical disregard of the infamous McCarthy witch-hunt, the Cold War and Brinkmanship, and Foster's deviousness, particularly during the Suez crisis.

Mosley also deals competently and sympathetically with the family network's nadir. Foster died in office, saddened by his son's preference for serving God (as a Catholic priest) rather than his country. Allen's career was destroyed by the Bay of Pigs fiasco, and he died unmourned by his long-suffering wife and his only son, who hated him. Eleanor alone lives on, the sole witness to the great events and private sorrows of three lives.

Mosley has managed to include a great deal of fresh material, but the bulk of the story is familiar to most of us. Yet Mosley re-tells it so well, allowing the tension to build up slowly — as in the Suez chapters, for example, which provide the best description of that sorry affair I have ever read — that one is kept constantly on the edge of one's chair. Leonard Mosley has always had this uncommon ability to excite and dazzle his readers, and never has he used it to greater effect than in this unusual and splendid biography.

The Edmonton Story

By AB KENT

The transition of Edmonton from a booming northern frontier town into a scattered urban-industrial agglomeration holds some useful lessons for other cities in evolution.

Edmonton, The Emerging Metropolitan Pattern, is the title of the 15th and latest volume published by the University of Victoria in its Western Geographical Series, in which nine geographers and an economist examine what has happened to the urban environment in recent decades.

Editor Peter J. Smith, specialist in government planning as a factor of change in urban environment, has collaborated with two colleagues — one a University of Victoria graduate — in chapters dealing with residential development, and the annexation process, a well-known phenomenon in other Alberta cities.

Noting that the latter process is new to Edmonton, Smith says the political warning signs appeared more that 20 years ago, with the first serious confrontation in the early 60s. A decade later suburban communities were strong enough politically and demographically to assert their independence and challenge Edmonton's efforts to absorb them.

Decentralization of public and commercial services, largely shopping centres, is a growing manifestation of change, but without formulas defining or situating them, Smith said. He predicts conflict and the inevitability of compromising interests.

Edmonton has seen a polarization of attitudes, prelude to a period of powerful change in which planners and pragmatists will engage each other; the pragmatists are challenged seriously for the first time.

Smith views the scenario as possibly the citizen's "last chance to shape the future before we are overwhelmed by events."

Conway Funnier Off Screen

By NANCY ANDERSON

Tim Conway, who is funnier off screen, tells a hilarious story about the time he lost almost the entire U.S. Army. It happened while he was serving his country at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

At. Ft. Lewis, according to Tim, there was a set of books which showed the location of every army unit, and it was the duty of some soldier, especially assigned to the chore, to rearrange pages as the military moved so that the merest platoon could be located promptly by a fast rifle through the legers.

Unfortunately for Tim and for the military, he was the soldier ordered to keep the books and, while so doing, he lost most of the army.

"In the Pacific, I had nobody but cooks," he relates.

Anyway, Tim, who insists the story is true, says he may make a movie out of it sometime, though he hasn't yet so much as written the script.

Meanwhile, Tim has written and is starring in They Went That Away, a feature for The International Picture Show, Inc. (TIPS) of Atlanta.

The movie will go into production March 27 in the Atlanta vicinity and will be Tim's second for TIPS which already has an agreement with him for a third.

His first TIPS film was The Billion Dollar Hobo, which opened recently in the Carolinas.

As to his affiliation with The Carol Burnett Show, Tim hopes it will endure indefinitely.

"If the show goes, I'll go," is the way he puts it.

He's bemused by the judgment of certain critics of television violence who proclaimed The Carol Burnett Show the second most violent on the air, immediately after Starsky and Hutch, and he's confused by criticism from the Gray Panther set aimed at the elderly character he plays on the show.

"If you make fun of an older person, they protest," he notes, "but if you make fun of somebody who's 43 years old, nobody says a word. What's the difference?"

However, in deference to Gray Panther complaints, he has toned down his act.

"We try not to be caustic about it," he says. "Two shuffles and you're out."

The Burnett players don't rehearse their skits before presenting them in front of audiences, Tim continues.

"That way we keep it pretty fresh," he thinks. "We have the fastest guns in town when it comes to people capable of running with sketches."

A natural wit, Tim's a fast guy himself when it comes to repartee; though he takes a half-second break before answering the question, "How did your home town, Chagrin Falls, Ohio, get its name?"

"Chagrin Falls," Tim ponders. "I really don't know. I guess it was chagrined because it's such a little falls."

Universal's FM, a movie about life behind the mikes in a radio station, will spawn both a record album and a book, according to producer Rand Holston.

The picture will probably be out in July, he says, and the album a month earlier. More than 100 songs, 90 percent of them previously recorded, are being used in the picture.

While Diane Sherrill was recording her new Showcase single, Cincinnati Sidewalks, her friend, Waylon Jennings, dropped by the studio to listen and ventured that the song would be improved by some good, masculine harmony.

Diane said, "Maybe so."

With that, suiting his action to his words, Waylon overdubbed the harmony he'd suggested.

"He's really a friend," Diane sighed, telling about what happened. "When someone cares enough about another person's session to make a suggestion and to sing harmony, that's touching."

En route to a concert date, J. D. Sumner (formerly with Elvis' act) and Larry Strickland, bass singer with The Stamps, were killing time by finger wrestling when Sumner broke his finger.

He continued his concert tour with his hand in a cast.

The Tarzan movie Warners is going to make is now entitled Greystoke, since Tarzan waa a British nobleman of that name.

Mavericks Still Roaming West

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you have wondered what Bret Maverick and his brother Bart have been up to for the past 16 years, be assured they have not reformed.

Bret and Bart are still roaming the West, a deck of cards in hand, a con job in the making and a fast getaway horse stashed nearby.

They are up to the same old tricks in The New Maverick, an ABC movie designed to launch the newest member of the clan, Ben Maverick, into a series of his own.

James Garner is back as Bret and Jack Kelly is Bart once more. Charles Franks stars as Ben, the son of English cousin Beau Maverick, played by Roger Moore in the original series seen 1956-62.

"I play a kid brought up on the East Coast who was kicked out of Harvard for running a card game," said Franks. "He feels so much a part of the clan he heads west to join Bret and Bart."

In the two hour movie, which ABC has not scheduled, Ben proves as adept a con artist as his cousins. In fact, more so.

"Jim Garner said I'd probably seen the old Maverick and I said I hadn't," Franks said. "I was too busy playing too many sports and running around.

"So I tuned in to the reruns one afternoon. I found it dated, four-walled and without any vistas. It was all done on the backlot. I found it not very exciting except for the characters. Jim agreed that it is outdated, but at the time it was very exciting."

The New Maverick was filmed entirely on location in Arizona near Tucson and Nogales, and it adds tremendously to the appeal. Some scenes were filmed on the Sharp Ranch, only 100 metres from the Mexican border. Wood for the ranch house was shipped down the Colorado River, then brought overland by mule train.

It is at the ranch that Franks meets his love interest and future companion in deception—if the show becomes a series. She is Nell, played by Susan Blanchard, who is also Franks' wife.

"I'm thrilled she's in it," he said. "She's the best actress I've ever worked with. The last time we worked together was four years ago in a soap in New York.

This is Franks' third pilot. He was previously in Panache, a swashbuckler, and Riding High, from the movie Hearts of the West.

"I think the first two were as good as Maverick," he said.

His only previous Westerns were Riding High, actually about making movie Westerns, and Go West, Young Girl, in which he played a cavalry officer. "I think the only way to approach a Western now is with a bit of humor," he said. "A serious saga is hard to sustain."

Franks was born 31 years ago in Olympia, Wash., and was never east of Yakima until he went to Vermont to enroll at Middlebury College.

He acted in stock companies until he headed for New York and landed a role in the soap opera All My Children.

"Susan and I auditioned the same day," he said. "We got married on the show and got married for real last June.

He was in the theatrical movies The One and Only and The Other Side of the Mountain, Part II, the TV movies Ski Lift to Death and Tarantulas, and had guest star roles on The Love Boat, Police Woman, Barnaby Jones and What Really Happened To the Class of '65.

A few years ago, when Lee Majors was threatening to quit The Six Million Dollar Man, Franks was suggested as a replacement but Lee Majors came back.

Franks was at first reluctant to take the role in The New Maverick.

"I originally turned it down," he said. "I didn't want to be cast as a young Jim Garner. Then I read the script by Juanita Bartlett. It's the best I've ever read and I called up and accepted.
